The President's refusal to give Congress any ideas on farm relief prior to the fifteenth of April reveals the most appalling intellectual bankruptcy in the history of the Capitol.

* * * *

This leaves a dozen Senators unable to ascertain whether they have the courage of Mr. Hoover's convictions.

* * * *

Only those who were in France in March, 1918, can appreciate the psychological effect upon the Americans and the Allies of the announcement that Foch was in supreme command. Every time a shell from "Big Bertha" fell in the heart of Paris after that it sounded like a dud.

In this emergency Gov. Johnston should consult Ma Ferguson.

Amid the eulogies pronounced upon the supreme military genius of the World War we fail to note the Hindenburg line.

The odds are now two to one that Jimmy Walker will select a new chief for Tammany Hall before the Commissioners select a new chief of police.

The report that six tons of grass seed have just been scattered over the public parks is the most effective means we have heard of yet to get the starlings off the District Building cornice.

Bob La Follette, in the bronze masterpiece of a distinguished sculptor, calls attention to the crowded condition of Statuary Hall, and various schemes are suggested for taking care of the surplus works of art. Why not put some of them at intervals along Pennsylvania avenue to serve as a terrible warning to the starlings?

When one thinks of the amount of marble that has gone into Ethan Allen it makes one question the proverbial thriftiness of the Vermont Yankee.

Elihu Root's optimism over the World Court appears to be the most pessimistic news that has come out of Geneva for years.

There seems to be considerable feeling even yet on the part of some people who in the last election voted for Smith and got Jones.

Scarface Al Capone slipped into Chicago so quietly that there wasn't time to turn out the National Guard in his honor.

GEN. J. AGUIRRE SEIZED; CALLES' ARMY IS DIVIDED

Vera Cruz Rebel Chief, Overtaken in Flight, Faces Court.

AGRARIANS FIGHTING REVOLT IN CHIHUAHUA

FEDERALS PREPARING FOR ATTACK ON NACO

U. S. Mounts Guns Covering Border City as Insurgent Force Approaches.

Mexico City, March 20 (A.P.).—An official report was received at Chapultepec Castle tonight that Gen. Jesus M. Aguirre, principal rebel leader in the State of Vera Cruz, was captured at 5:40 p. m. today at Aguacatillo, Vera Cruz.

The capture was made by Gen. Eliodoro Hernandez, and Gen. Acosta, commander of the federals in Vera Cruz, said that the prisoner was on his way to the federal headquarters camp, where he would be court-martialed. Gen. Aguirre's brother, Simon, also a rebel leader, was captured and executed about ten days ago.

High official sources here said tonight that Gen. Plutarco Calles, after reestablishing order in Torreon, would divide his forces, one contingent, made up of about 18,000 selected troops, would be sent on the trail of Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, whose rebel army of about 4,000 men was tonight understood to be nearing Jiminez, half-way between Torreon and Chihuahua City.

This will leave Gen. Calles a reserve of about 12,000 men, which will be used to consolidate positions about Torreon, although a goodly portion of them probably will be started toward Sinaloa to stamp out the rebellion on the West Coast.

Agrarians Fight Rebels.

Chihuahua City, Mexico, March 20 (A.P.).—(By courier to the A.P.).—Agrarian forces in the States of Chihuahua and Sonora have risen against the revolutionists and have formed small bands to harass the rebels.

Sonora and Chihuahua are under rebel control, but it has been learned here that one band of 200 agrarians battled rebel troops until four of the farmers had been killed. The rest of the band withdrew and split up, but are still roaming throughout Chihuahua, doing such damage as they can to rebel troops.

The rebels have been forced to patrol all railroads to keep the agrarians from destroying them to hinder the rebel retreat.

Rebel Attacks Loom.

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 20 (A.P.).—Attacks by rebels on two federal strongholds in western Mexico appeared in preparation or under way tonight. Information here late today indicated an attack was being launched by Gen. Ramon Iturbe on Mazatlan, Sinaloa seaport town, held by Gen. Jaime Carrillo for the government.

At the same time Gen. Fausto Topete, governor of Sonora, announced plans to proceed against Naco, Sonora, held by Gen. Cas Gonzales, tonight or tomorrow morning.

Previous knowledge that skirmishing was in progress near Mazatlan was confirmed in a message to Gen. Topete from Gen. F. R. Nanzo, recently sent south to take charge of rebel troops in British Ruler Unable to Even Get Radio News of Grand National.

Liverpool, March 20 (A.P.).—King George, convalescing at Bognor, not only will not see the Grand National run off at Aintree, but will not even risk the nervous excitement of listening to accounts of it broadcast over the radio. The Prince of Wales, however, plans to take the day off, and with crowds of other Londoners, pile into one of the 300 special trains which will speed from the capital to Liverpool early Friday morning and return immediately after the great 'chase.

Members of the royal families of the Old World always have been counted upon to watch the classic at Aintree. Last year King Amanullah of Afghanistan saw America's pride, Billy Barton, fall and bump his nose at the last jump, ending his chance to win the race. Since that exciting moment, King Amanullah himself has been unseated by the Afghans.

FLOOD RELIEF WORK PROCEEDS RAPIDLY

Refugees Being Freed From Camps to Start Tasks of Rebuilding.

TWO LOANS CONSIDERED

Atlanta, Ga., March 20 (A.P.).—Edwin H. Calvin, Red Cross worker, telegraphed today that he had been successful in his latest Paul Revere effort to warn the residents of the Apalachicola River Valley in Florida of the coming flood waters.

The Red Cross worker said he was well ahead of the flood crest. His message came from Blountstown, Fla., which is south of River Junction, a city at the confluence of the Flint and Apalachicola Rivers, where the business section was under high water.

Meanwhile, relief and succor work went ahead rapidly in regions of south Alabama and northwest Florida over which the flood had passed. Additional refugees were permitted to return to their homes on the south Alabama section and take up the work of reclaiming their property and again resume the business of making a living. They had

HOOVER'S FARM AID IDEAS KEPT SECRET

Congress Groups Seek in Vain to Obtain Views for Use in Drawing Bills.

DETAILED PLAN DOUBTED

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

President Hoover has set out to debunk those enthusiastic campaign pictures which placed him in the role of holding a big stick over Congress and, in doing so, has thrown considerable uncertainty about farm relief temporarily, at least.

With the agricultural committees of the House and Senate meeting here next week, the Senate committee Monday and the House later in the week, it was authoritatively made known yesterday that Mr. Hoover has no plan for them to work on. Their only guide is to be the broad principles laid down in the campaign and their legislative capabilities.

The President plans to make his views known in his special message to Congress, but that will not be until April 15. In the meantime, he is so anxious to studiously preserve what is authoritatively described as the "constitutional relationship" between the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the Government that he will not even make known his views to members of Congress who call upon him.

Representative Dickinson, the redoubtable farm relief exponent from Iowa, unsuccessfully sought to get a line on those views yesterday. Senator McNary, of Oregon, chairman of the Senate agricultural committee, has asked that Secretary of Agriculture Hyde be permitted to appear before the committee. Maybe, a line could be obtained from him. It is extremely doubtful if Hyde will appear. His views used to favor the equalization fee, though it is of course, hardly likely that they do now.

But the President's attitude puts up to such men as Representatives Haugen, chairman of the House agricultural committee, and Dickinson, as well as Senator McNary, the task of working out a bill themselves. It won't be so hard for the senator because he got off of the equalization fee long ago, but Haugen and Dickinson have never admitted that they were wrong. They met the campaign with the promise that although they had failed to get their bill across, Mr. Hoover could be depended upon to get the farmers out of the woods.

There were any number of newspaper reports from Miami Beach which depicted Mr. Hoover as giving all sorts of study to his farm plan, as having virtually completed it, in fact. It was, for that matter, the general impression that when the extra session of Congress

NINETEEN LIVES LOST AS TRAINS MEET HEAD-ON

Flames Trap Passengers in Debris of Canadian Railroad Cars.

DEEP SNOW AND COLD HINDER RELIEF CREW

Isolated Scene Hampers Work of Rescue and Death List May Increase.

Toronto, Ontario, March 20 (N.Y.W N.S.).—Nineteen persons were killed, some of them burned to death, when two fast passenger trains on the Canadian National Railroad crashed head-on at Drocourt near Parry Sound, Ontario, early this morning.

The toll of injured is as yet undetermined, but first accounts from the wreck, which occured in an almost uninhabited stretch of country, describe it as heavy, particularly on the west bound train where all the deaths occurred.

Most of the dead were riding in a colony coach, apparently a wooden car, near the front of the train, which telescoped and went up in flames immediately after the wreck. Passengers in the eastbound train were tumbled violently from their berths, and had to listen to the screams of the dying in the car, powerless to help. The remaining cars, which had not left the track, together with the injured in them, were saved from the fire when passengers hurriedly uncoupled them and pushed them down the track.

Worst Wreck Since 1910.

The cause of what is the worst train wreck on Canadian soil since 1910, when 63 persons were killed in a derailment at Saulte Ste. Marie, Ontario, has not been determined. The trains were scheduled to meet a Waubamik, just north of Parry Sound. It was reported that due to the lateness of the westbound train another meeting place was arranged. The crash occurred between the two points. Owing to the fact that Dan Barstead, the conductor of the westbound train, was killed, it will probably be some time before it is determined upon whose orders he overran the meeting place.

The work of rescue was handicapped because the tragedy occurred in a wilderness almost completely inaccessible by road. Telegraph wires were put out of commission and telephone communication was very poor, it was reported. Relief trains finally reached the scene from Parry Sound and Sudbury Junction bearing doctors, nurses and supplies. Many of the injured, buried beneath the debris of the shattered cars, could not be reached before the arrival of a wrecking train sent out to clear the track.

The flames from the burning colony car lighted up the country for miles around. Considering the fact that the trains were supposed to have been traveling at a high rate of speed, the havoc wrought, both in lives lost and in damage to the trains, was surprisingly slight, trainmen said. None of the sleeping cars left the rails and most of the damage was confined to the two locomotives, the two baggage cars of each train and the coach of the westbound express.

No Death List Available.

Reports from the scene said that the list of dead may rise as the tangled mass of steel is cleaned up by the wrecking crew. The work has been handicapped by snow and cold.

No list of the dead or injured could be drawn up, but it is known that

MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH.

Death of Generalissimo of Allied Armies Is Peaceful Passnig.

FAMILY AROUND BED AS GRIM FIGHT ENDS

NOTED GENERALS MIX WITH HUMBLE AT BIER

'Let's Go Ahead,' Last Words of Man Who Hurled Back Legions of Kaiser.

Paris, March 20 (A.P.).—Ferdinand Foch, generalissimo of the allied armies in the World War, died peacefully just as the sun was going down at 5:30 o'clock this evening. The man who led to victory the greatest aggregation of armies ever assembled, passed away quietly with his family about him and, devout Catholic that he was, with his mind and soul at peace after his last confession to his parish priest. He was in his seventy-seventh year.

He lay tonight at rest in the field uniform of a commanding general. His face was strikingly more peaceful than at any time since death began the struggle to claim him ten weeks ago.

Marshal Ferdinand Foch this evening had been lying on a lounge near an open window. He was conscious and silent while the nurse was making up his bed.

Dr. Daveniere said to the marshal, while the nurse was arranging his bed: "Monsieur le Marechal, we are going to put you back in bed."

The marshal replied: "Bien, allons-y," which may be translated: "All right, let's go ahead."

Suddenly there was a change in his face, a twitching, he placed his hand on his heart, lay down on the bed and spoke no more.

The world had known that the end of the great soldier was not far off. Yet when he died there came a throb of sorrow that encompassed the hearts of all men. With his passing the greatest military figure of the greatest of all wars disappeared.

Determined to the Last.

A small man, a frail man, Marshal Foch in his last fight displayed those qualities of grimness, of determination, of the will to win that distinguished him through all his years, from youth to gallant old age. He was in his seventy-eighth year.

From day to day over the more than two months of his illness, the marshal had scoffed at his doctors, made light of his ailments, denounced the ministrations of his attendants and spoke cheerily of his future plans—plans linked closely with past campaigns and war maps.

Early this morning the marshal showed no greater signs of dissolution than for a week past; indeed, he seemed to have had a comfortable night, and as his pulse and temperature had reacted in his favor, there were hopes that he might still cling to life—though only briefly.

Wife and Daughters There.

But the ebb and flow had been too constant to foster hope of recovery, and soon it became evident that now it was a matter of hours only. Doctors summoned to the bedside made their final examination. The marshal's two daughters were there, and his wife, coming tearfully into the room, was gently told that the marshal's hour had come. Intuitively she knew that as she entered and murmured, "God's will be done."

A priest from St. Clotilde Church administered extreme unction. Emerging from the house he sadly remarked: "I have just experienced the greatest emotion of my life."

Premier Poincare informed the

OKLAHOMA SENATE REMOVES GOVERNOR

ENDS LONG PARTY FIGHT

Oklahoma City, March 20 (U.P.).—Henry S. Johnston, seventh Governor of the State of Oklahoma, was ousted from office by the State senate today on impeachment charges of official incompetence and corruption.

The vote was 35 to 9.

The ouster vote was taken on the charge of general incompetency.

Johnston had been suspended for nearly two months, following the vote of impeachment against him by both houses of the Oklahoma legislature. The impeachment followed a political storm over Johnston's head which involved him and Mrs. Mamie Hammonds, his confidential secretary.

The trial before the senate body lasted 38 days, during which the governor spent seven days on the stand in defense of his administration.

Johnston's removal also marks the passing of Mrs. Hammonds, who, it was alleged dominated the governor's office. This allegation was first made in the attempted impeachment session in December, 1927.

It caused the so-called "ewe lamb" rebellion and lead to the impeachment charges in Johnston's trial.

Lieut. Gov. W. J. Holloway, who has been acting governor since Johnston's suspension, January 21, now takes the chief executive's chair and will serve

SUICIDE SHATTERS WIFE'S GOOD NEWS

GAS KILLS J. T. MAUCK

The promise of blue skies, with a position for her husband and an extension of time for the payment of back rent on their humble home at 724 Euclid street northwest, last night turned into grief for Mrs. Frances Mauck when she returned home to tell the glad news. She found her despondent mate lying in their gas-filled bedroom.

The husband, James Thomas Mauck, 34-year-old painter, whom relatives said had been out of work since November, was pronounced dead an hour later, after the fire department rescue squad and Dr. J. E. Lewis had worked vainly to revive him. Dr. J. Ramsay Nevitt, District coroner, issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Through sobs last night Mrs. Mauck told the story of the couple's struggles since November, when Mauck was last able to get work. She said that through her own labors they were able to buy food, but that for two months they had been unable to pay the rent of $22.50 a month.

Summoned to Municipal Court yesterday morning, Mrs. Mauck said, a judgment for their eviction was obtained by the real estate agents for the place.

The judgment greatly depressed her husband, Mrs. Mauck said, and when they parted at the court he told her that he was going to the hall of the Man Is Accused of Killing To Win Admiration of Girl

Police Charge He Manufactured Supposed Plot Against Her Father and Then Slew Victim He Hunted Down and Trapped as Plotter.

Chicago, March 20 (A.P.).—A young street car motorman, who posed as a detective to become a hero in his sweetheart's eyes, today was held for the grand jury for murder. The police accused him of fabricating an extortion plot against his girl's father and then killing an innocent man as the extortionist to win her admiration.

The characters in this odd case are: Stanley Reichel, 28, the motorman; Michael Rybska, 25, employe of a finance company, his victim; Frances Masalanka, the sweetheart; John Masalanka, prosperous contractor, her father.

As the police reconstructed the case, Reichel adopted the fabulous extortion plot and under the soubriquet of "the eel" he wrote letters to Masalanka demanding $500 on pain of death. He then presented himself to his sweetheart as a private detetive and offered to track down the extortionist. Frances deemed it a good idea and said "the eel" should be killed for writing such notes to her father.

The next step found Reichel hunting some one whom he could make "the eel," said, and, after much maneuvering, he wove the unsuspecting young man into his web, cornered him in a garage near the Masalankas' home and beat him to death. He had tracked down "the eel," killed him, and now to win his sweetheart, the police theorized.

In the meantime, however, Reichel had failed to reckon with Masalanka. The latter took the matter none too seriously at first, but when he did he suspected Reichel and told the police about it. It was a coincidence last night when the police went to the Masalanka home to arrest Reichel as "the eel" only to have him walk in and announce he had killed the extortionist and had the body out in the garage. He said he had tracked down "the eel" but had been forced to kill him in self-defense.

It sounded all right, but the police were skeptical. They found some discrepancies in his tale and held him in custody. The coroner's jury also was skeptical and today ordered Reichel held to the grand jury for the murder.

Bank Is Called Bootlegger Ally by Philadelphia Jury

Financiers' Lack of Frankness Held "Appalling;" Active or Passive Participation in Rum Selling Seen; Federal Inquiry Is Suggested by Judge Lewis.

Philadelphia, March 20 (A.P.).—Denunciation of an alleged "alliance of bankers and bootleggers operating in violation of the law" was made by the racket grand jury today in a presentment to Judge Edwin O. Lewis, who called it into being last August.

During the seven months it has been in session continuously the jury has investigated gang murders, bootlegging, rum running, police bribery and other underworld activities.

In the course of its investigation the grand jury was informed of deposits in the Union Bank & Trust Co. aggregating more than $10,000,000. The depositors, District Attorney Monaghan declared, gave fictitious names and addresses. Officials of the bank, he said, despite their frequent appearance before the grand jury officials had not furnished information that established the identity of the ten or a dozen persons in whose names the millions was deposited. The prosecutor alleged that the money belonged to bootleggers.

The grand jury's presentment today described the bank officials' lack of frankness as "appalling," and declared that they were "participating either actively or passively" in bootlegging.

The report referred to the bank as the "Union National Bank," which was its title prior to its merger with the Mutual Trust Co. in December, 1927, when Joseph S. McCulloch, head of the Union National, was elected president of the new organization.

Judge Lewis recommended that the attention of the United States Attorney General be called to the bank in this connection with a view to revoking its charter, but later lawyers pointed out that it was no longer a Federal institution and that it was unlikely that the State of Pennsylvania could interfere, as the acts charged in the grand jury's report were committed before it obtained its State charter.

The $10,000,000 was placed in the Union National Bank April 2, 1925, and kept there two years. The grand jury report asserted that these millions were manipulated so that all trace of transactions was covered up "with the help of bank officials."

Hoover and Gibson To Discuss League

Chief of U. S. Delegation to Be White House Guest Over Week-End.

(United Press.)

President Hoover's views relative to the forthcoming meeting of the League of Nations preparatory commission on disarmament will be outlined to Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation, during the next few days.

Gibson, who will sail for Europe soon, was invited yesterday to be a White House guest until Monday. It is understood the President plans to go into every phase of the question, touching historically both land and naval armaments.

Henry L. Stimson, who will arrive Sunday to take over the office of Secretary of State, may also be a White House guest over the week-end. Gibson plans to sail probably late next week, to reach Geneva a few days before the opening of the conference on April 15.

chamber of deputies of the loss France had sustained.

"Gentlemen," he said, "Marshal Foch is dead. A great soldier and a great Frenchman is gone."

Marshal Foch will receive a national funeral, highest tribute of the French nation to its illustrious dead.

Premier Poincare, immediately after announcing the death of the marshal in the chamber of deputies, gathered all the cabinet ministers around him and called a special cabinet meeting in one of the salons adjoining the chamber of deputies.

The cabinet agreed immediately that Marshal Foch in death should be shown the greatest honors which France could give him even as in life he had held highest military rank.

There have been but five such national funerals previously. One statesman, one poet, one scientist and two presidents of France have received such a national tribute. They are Gambetta, Victor Hugo, Pasteur and the two presidents who died in office, Sadi Carnot and Felix Faure.

A national funeral, aside from its great pomp, is distinguished by the passage of the cortege under the Arc de Triomphe, the same honor as was accorded to the allied armies in the great parade of the 14th of July, 1919, celebrating the peace.

Funeral Probably Sunday.

The funeral probably will be held on Sunday. This not only would give time for the outside delegations to arrive, but would also allow the whole population to pay a last tribute to the man who led the allied host to victory in 1918.

Invitations have been sent to a number of allied generals and admirals to act as pallbearers. Orders have been given for the mobilization of French escort troops, and notices of instructions have been sent to war veteran associations and similar bodies.

The route to be followed by the procession was fixed in consultation with the prefecture of police. It will be lined throughout with police and troops.

Ordinarily the funeral services for a military hero are held in the military chapel of the Invalides. But as there will be a vast concourse of mourners for Marshal Foch, perhaps headed by President Doumergue, it may be found necessary to have the church services in the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

The marshal probably will rest beside that other great soldier of France, Napoleon Bonaparte, in the crypt under the dome at the rear of the Invalides. It long has been planned that all marshals and generals who commanded French armies in the World War should be placed in a circle around the chief hero of French military history. Almost at the moment of the marshal's death the senate finance committee was considering a bill already voted by the chamber which would authorize this grouping. The committee agreed to the idea for marshals, but asked further discussion on the inclusion of generals in the scheme.

End Comes Peacefully.

Ever since the Germans entered Paris after the war of 1870, all the entrances to the arch have been changed and only pedestrians permitted to go there where the unknown soldier is buried. It is only on occasions of great importance that processions are permitted to pass through.

The end came peacefully, with the marshal's wife and his two daughters in the room, after he had received the last sacraments of the church. The two daughters had barely reached the house as their father was breathing his last. Drs. Davenieres and Heitz-Boyer had been working over the marshal for a half-hour when they decided to summon the marshal's wife and tell her that her famous husband was doomed.

As early as February 26 the Associated Press had been informed that the combination of diseases could have but one end at the marshal's advanced age. A week, perhaps ten days—that was all his doctors would give him, but he clung tenaciously to life and fought on.

Marshal Petain, an old comrade in arms, was the first official to arrive at the little house where the marshal died. He went to the marshal's wife and expressed his sorrow at the death of his old comrade in simple and touching terms.

News of the passing of France's greatest warrior struck consternation in the Chamber of Deputies, and today's session was immediately adjourned.

Father L'Hande, famous preacher and personal friend of the marshal, arrived after Foch had died.

"The marshal told me some days ago that he held no hope of recovery," Father L'Hande said, quoting the marshal as adding:

"I have had my span of life. All I want now is heaven."

Doctors Bar His Brother.

Father Foch, a Jesuit priest, the marshal's brother, who has been too ill himself at Montpellier to come to Paris for the past two months, had been asked to come to Paris on Monday when a crisis set in. The Jesuit father reached Paris only this morning and wanted to see his soldier brother immediately, but the doctors, fearing the effect of the recognition of his beloved brother upon the patient, ruled that the meeting must wait until tomorrow.

The marshal's death was apparently without suffering.

German Drive, 11 Years Ago Today, Foch's Hour

(Associated Press.)

Eleven years ago last night German troops were moving up in dense masses to strike their most terrific blow of the war just at dawn March 21 on a 50-mile front against British troops. The roar of preparatory bombardment rattled doors and windows in Dover, far across on the east coast of England.

The final struggle for mastery was at hand; the hour for the coming of the greatest soldier of the war, Ferdinand Foch, marshal of France, had struck.

Nine days later Foch was generalissimo of all the allied and American forces on the western front. First word of this final act to weld into a single force the armies battling back the German on-surge came in a cryptic message of congratulation to Foch sent by President Wilson March 29, 1918.

The news was hurried to the various ministries and Marshal Petain was the first to arrive. He was promptly followed by Marshal Lyautey. Then came Gens. Niessel and Gouraud, the four soldiers being the first to reach the house.

Then came Premier Poincare and former President Millerand.

Humbler Men Appear.

But all who came were not marshals, generals, presidents or prime ministers. Humbler men appeared, some wearing caps and many collarless and wearing linen which was almost redolent of the trench life of ten years ago. There were wooden-legged and armless men of erect bearing in the crowd that filled the dimly lit Rue Grenelle and extended well into the Invalides Square, under the dome of which the marshal is to find his last resting place.

These pollus spoke in hushed tones as they passed the residence. Some made the sign of the cross; others merely lifted hats or caps, but all were sad.

Official announcement of the marshal's death was made from the steps of his home at 7 o'clock tonight.

Gen. Pershing's Tribute.

Crowds began to gather in the dimly-lit street as the parish priest of St. Clotilde, leading a small party of ecclesiastics and male nurses, arrived at the home to care for the marshal's body.

All the windows on the first floor of the mansion were closed and the marshal's body, dressed in the field uniform of a general of division, was placed upon the bed.

Gen. John J. Pershing, the marshal's close associate in the World War, in a statement to the Associated Press, paid glowing tribute, saying:

"The passing of Marshal Foch fills all our hearts with sadness. He will be mourned not only by the French nation, but by all peoples whose armies fought under his leadership in the World War. As my friend and comrade his death brings to me a profound sense of personal loss."

Germans Still Resent Foch Act at Compiegne

Berlin, March 20 (A.P.).—Marshal Foch's death finds the German popular mentality still too much imbued with the spirit of resentment over what is regarded as the humiliating manner with which the German armistice commission, headed by the late Matthias Erzberger, was treated at Compeigne, to make it seem advisible for men in public office to comment on the distinguished Frenchman's career, though nobody questions his military genius.

President von Hindenburg declined a statement on his famous adversary, not because he has not the highest regard for his opponent's ability, but because he is no longer merely a field marshal, but is also the head of the nation. One of the president's advisers explained to the Associated Press correspondent:

"Were Von Hindenburg merely a retired field marshal there would be no objection to his paying public tribute as he often does privately, to his late adversary in the most gigantic military struggle known in history. But Von Hindenburg is now president. As such he is a political personage.

"However highly President von Hindenberg may esteem Foch as a military man, the German people simply wouldn't understand why he should pay tribute to the man who at Compeigne so deeply humiliated the German armistice commission. It is not his qualities of a soldier that we question, but the manner in which he 'rubbed in' his authority. Had he been satisfied merely in obtaining our capitulation there would be as little objection as there was to Von Hindenburg paying rtibute to Haig. We are still too close to the events of the war."

LEGION IS GRIEVED BY DEATH OF CHIEF

Marshal Foch Was One of Its Two Honorary Commanders; Came Here in 1921.

WAS WARMLY ACCLAIMED

Indianapolis, Ind., March 20 (A.P.).—Marshal Ferdinand Foch, who died in Paris today, was one of two honorary national commanders of the American Legion. The other is Gen. John J. Pershing. Both were voted the title by the National Legion convention in Philadelphia in 1926.

In 1921 Marshal Foch came to this country as a guest of the Legion. He covered 20,000 miles and his journey led him through the Eastern States, the wheat fields of the Middle West, the vast plains of Texas and the plantations in the South. His trip was climaxed in the national convention of the Legion at Kansas City.

Literally hundreds of thousands of legionnaires and citizens turned out in all principal cities to see and hear Marshal Foch. His personal aide was Francis Drake, an officer of the A. E. F. and a legionnaire. While still at sea Marshal Foch was deluged with wireless messages welcoming him to America. A flotilla of destroyers met the French liner Paris as she steamed in the narrows, October 28. The marshal was greeted by a nineteen-gun salute. New York gave him one of its typically famous receptions. From there he started westward.

Received Strange Gifts.

At Washington, Mo., legionnaires of the town, headed by the mayor, appeared at the special train and presented a dozen corncob pipes to the marshal. The gifts in Missouri were but the forerunner of a strange collection from all parts of the country. They included such objects as Theodora, a wild bobcat; a scorpion embedded in glass, a game rooster, medals by the score, three gold swords and an Indian war club.

At St. Paul a penny postcard bearing the message "Djil-allah-laquat" and the name of Charles Swietzer was handed to Marshal Foch. He smiled broadly. That night, exactly at midnight, Charles Switzer, janitor in a downtown store, had an audience of an hour and a half with Marshal Foch. The mystic words he had written on the card were the passport.

"You see, we were comrades in the First Colonial Regiment at Algiers in 1877," said Switzer. "Foch was a lieutenant and I was a sergeant."

Marshal Foch was much impressed with the Grand Canyon. After commenting that it was too bad that the Rhine was not encased between such magnificent mountains, he said:

"It would take the combination of Dante, Victor Hugo and Pierre Loti to begin to describe the scene. As for painters, how helpless they must feel in the presence of such a stupendous model."

Saw Hopi War Dance.

At El Tovar the Hopi Indians put on their famous war dance. Hopi Joe, with a wicked-looking arrow, danced around the fire and came very near the marshal. Past National Commander Franklin D'Olier called, "Joe, stay away from the marshal," thinking that the arrow was about to jab the marshal's knee.

"Never mind, I've been closer to death than that," said Marshal Foch.

Marshal Foch also visited the shrine at Centralia, Wash., where legionnaires were killed in an armistice day parade.

He met the questions of enterprising reporters with unfailing good humor. One asked him what he thought of the American girl. He replied:

"Monsieur, I have reached the age of discretion. Pardon me if I do not reply."

At St. Maries, Idaho, he was met by three French war brides. The leader said:

"Oh, monsieur le marechal, we love France. We love our native country. Do take us back."

"Mesdames, you are here in America," replied the marshal. "This is your home. You must never forget France. But you must love your new country and respect your husbands."

Gave Message to Youth.

While riding on the train Foch was asked to write a message to the youth of America. He said that for their motto he would give them his own, taken from Racine. It is:

"I fear God and have no other fear."

At Harrisonburg, Va., he paused to do honor to the Confederate leaders. He was handed a message signed by an unknown person under the name, "A Patriot." It read: "Gen. Lee is the greatest traitor America has ever known." Turning to his aid, in the presence of the group, Marshal Foch said: "If Gen. Lee is a traitor, then I wish that France and America had more traitors. I believe Gen. Lee was one of the greatest military leaders the world has ever known."

In Washington Marshal Foch represented the French government at the burial of the American Unknown Soldier.

Woman, Burned in Car, Murdered, Say Police

New Orleans, March 20 (A.P.).—Police late today became convinced that Mrs. Janet H. Baker was murdered after Mrs. Edwin Booth had told them she saw two men leaving the burning automobile in which Mrs. Baker's charred body was found.

This information, together with that given by a lodger in the Baker home that he saw Mrs. Baker drive off with a man in the car 45 minutes before the flaming machine was found in Audubon Park, has caused the police to drop accident or suicide theories. The description of one of the men leaving the car, police said, fitted that of the man seen with Mrs. Baker.

Foch's Abruptness Stunned Germans at Truce Session

"Who Are These Gentlemen and What Do They Want?" Asked Marshal as Envoys Entered His Car at Compiegne.

Paris, March 20 (A.P.).—Marshal Ferdinand Foch's connection with the great war will be perpetuated only slightly more through his military achievements than by the historical scene in the clearing of the Compiegne Forest, where, with his train drawn up opposite the special cars that brought the German armistice delegates, he awaited the plenipotentiaries in order to communicate terms to them.

The marshal was short and succinct with the German envoys—so much so, in fact, that they complained afterward that he had humiliated them.

When the Germans entered the marshal's car they were ushered to one side of a table. Opposite them Foch stood with the other allied plenipotentiaries. The first words formed this question from the marshal:

"Who are these gentlemen, and what do they want?"

Mathias Erzberger, leader of the Germans, was somewhat taken aback by the abruptness of this greeting. He hesitated a bit as if he had failed to understand the fiction by which Marshal Foch made it appear that he was unaware of the identity of the visitors. But he finally mastered himself and replied:

"We are the German plenipotentiaries who have come to receive terms for an armistice between the German and allied armies."

The marshal then upon handed to Herr Erzberger the text of the conditions already agreed upon by the allies. He added this short sentence:

"They are to be accepted as a whole."

There was no handshaking at this meeting. Neither was there any a couple of days later, when, after submitting the conditions to the German general headquarters at the Spa, Herr Erzberger received word from Hindenburg that they must be accepted, hard as they were.

The second meeting was more solemn than the first. Revolution had broken out in Germany and the envoys did not know whether they were signing on behalf of a republic or of a commune. They filed dejectedly into the car where Marshal Foch and the other delegates awaited them and sat down at the table with no more greeting than a stiff bow.

The Germans signed the document which spelled collapse of the greatest war machine that the world has ever known. Foch stood erect and imperturbable until the Germans, with tears in their eyes, arose and prepared to leave. Herr Erzberger said:

"Monsieur Marshal, a people of 65,000,000 souls suffers, but does not perish."

The marshal bowed slightly, as if touched by this emotional outburst, and replied, with a tinge of warmth:

"Very good."

AL CAPONE QUIZZED BY CHICAGO JURORS

FOLLOWED BY HUNDREDS

Chicago, March 20 (A.P.).—"Scarface Al" Capone, in pearl gray spats and clothes with the swank of exclusive tailoring, came back from Florida today to tell the Government about the liquor business, maybe.

The stocky, black-eyed, black-haired ruler of gangs should have felt at home with the boom-boom of flashlights in his ears and smell of powder in his nostrils. The explosions, however, upset the Federal Building, which had been awaiting his arrival for hours.

Stenographers screamed and men came running from offices as the photographers finally cornered Capone and convinced him of the necessity for pictures. George E. Q. Johnson, the district attorney, leaped from his chair, knowing Capone was in the building and, fearing trouble, demanded an end to the confusion.

Hundreds of curious persons followed "Scarface Al" as he left the Federal Building after cooling his heels for most of the morning without having appeared before the grand jury. He had declined to talk to newspaper men, the two livid marks on his left cheek, which give him his nickname, wrinkling as he shook his head negatively and repeated: "I don't care to answer."

Out of Racket, He Says.

Just before he was led to the grand jury waiting room, however, he said he knew nothing of the liquor racket in Chicago Heights which he was subpenaed to tell the grand jury about. In fact, he said, he had been in Florida for most of the last year and a half and was out of the liquor racket now.

Capone sauntered into the building via the Dearborn street entrance and leisurely took a seat in the district attorney's office. No one recognized him and he sat unnoticed for several minutes.

"How did you come to Chicago?" he was asked.

"I drove up from Florida with my brother, Ralph," he replied.

Drives Into City Alone.

"Two friends came with us, and I drove most of the way. Last night I left my friends at the Indiana State line and drove into Chicago alone. The first thing I did was to get in touch with my lawyers; then I visited my mother and sister."

This was the longest utterance of the day for Capone.

Would the gangster really testify before the grand jury? Would he be granted immunity? Would he sign an immunity waiver? If he did testify might it be used against him?

These were questions which Attorney Johnson said would remain unanswered officially. He instructed his staff to surround the Capone proceedings with the cloak of secrecy that usually accompanies the action of Federal grand juries.

Admitted to Jury Room.

In the late afternoon Capone was admitted to the grand jury room, without having indicated whether he would answer any questions.

Two hours later he emerged with two officers and disappeared in the crowd, still the man of mystery. What he had been asked by the grand jury and what he answered was not known, but Capone had lost one battle. Over the vigorous protests of his counsel, who insisted that Capone wanted to hurry back to Miami, District Attorney Johnson ordered him to reappear next Tuesday, when the grand jury will reconvene. Meanwhile, the gang leader will enjoy the novelty of collecting $3 a day expenses from the Government.

EDUCATORS, AIDING SEX INQUIRY, OUSTED

Three Members of Missouri University Faculty Are Ordered Dismissed.

TWO OTHERS CENSURED

Columbia, Mo., March 20 (A.P.).—The executive board of the board of curators of the University of Missouri today ordered the dismissal of three faculty members whom the board held responsible for recent circulation of questionnaires among students asking intimate questions as to sex and marriage.

Those dismissed are Max F. Meyer, professor of experimental psychology; Harmon D. DeGraff, assistant professor of sociology, and O. H. Mowrer, student assistant in psychology. Mowrer, however, was allowed to continue as a student.

The board's action was contained in a statement issued after the curators, in session with President Stratton D. Brooks and Secretary Leslie Cowan, had conducted an investigation.

Circulation of the questionnaire among approximately 1,000 men and women students was begun by a group of students in "the family," course of sociology, with the sanction of the dismissed professors. It created a furore in the university with petitions and counter-petitions denouncing and supporting the movement being circulated among students and business men of Columbia.

In its statement the board declared that the questionnaire should not have been circulated because "by its very nature it tends to create a condition which it is alleged to correct." The board also said that it could find no "justification for an inquiry that from its very nature could not produce any scientifically valid conclusions" and that while recognizing the instructional abilities of the individuals involved, "we feel that the circumstances that have arisen have so seriously impaired their usefulness that their further services are not desirable."

The board "expressed" regret that Jesse E. Wrench, associate professor of European history, and Russell Bauder, instructor in economics, who were not directly or officially concerned, but who were conferred with about certain phases of the questionnaire, did not use their influence to prevent the preparation and distribution of it."

Caucus Set for Today On Tammany Chieftain

New York, March 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—With the Tammany district leaders adamant in their avowed intention of "putting over" as the new leader of Tammany Hall one of their own number, and with the "elder statesmen" of the party, former Gov. Smith, Senator Wagner and Surrogate Foley, pursuing a policy of "hands off," John F. Curry, veteran leader of the Fifth district, tonight appeared to have jumped into first place for the selection to be made Friday.

Tomorrow at Tammany Hall the 34 district leaders will meet in caucus in an attempt to come to an agreement as to who shall be the successor of George W. Olvaney, resigned. Since James F. Egan, secretary of Tammany Hall, tonight sent out the call officially, a large attendance is expected. Friday the final vote is expected to be taken.

Head of Hudson Auto Firm Dies in France

Detroit, March 20 (A.P.).—The Detroit News says that information was received here today that Roscoe B. Jackson, president and general manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., died Tuesday night in Mentone, France, after a two days' illness from influenza. He was 50 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson left Detroit about a month ago for the winter season on the Riviera.

HOOVER LAUDS FOCH FOR HUMAN TRAITS

American Leaders Send Messages of Sorrow to Officials in Paris.

ALLENBY PAYS TRIBUTE

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover, in a formal statement yesterday, said he had "learned with sincere regret" of the death of Marshal Foch, with whom he was associated closely during the war.

The President's statement reads:

"I have learned with sincere regret of the death of Marshal Foch. I share the respect and admiration in which he is universally held, but beyond this it was my privilege to be closely associated with him in various activities after the war, and in this way to gain perhaps a special insight not only into his ability but also his fine human qualities of straightforwardness, kindness and modesty.

"I realize how keenly his loss will be felt by the French people. In this loss they have the full sympathy of our people."

Message to Mme. Foch.

At the request of President Hoover, the State Department instructed Ambassador Herrick, at Paris, to convey to Mme. Foch in the name of the President the sympathy of the United States at the death of Marshal Foch.

Secretary Kellogg issued a statement saying:

"I have learned with deep sorrow of the death of Marshal Foch, whose name is revered in America as the commander of the allied forces and as an outstanding example of a true patriot."

In the absence of Secretary Adams, Admiral Charles Hughes, chief of operations, made this statement on the passing of Marshal Foch:

"We all appreciate everything he has done for us. Formal regrets will be extended to the French Ambassador in Washington and the department has instructed the naval attache in Paris to extend to the French Minister of Marine the regrets of the United States Navy in their loss of this remarkable man."

Good Expresses Regret.

On behalf of the American Army, Secretary Good sent this message to Paul Painleve, minster of war:

"Our Army mourns with its former comrades the loss of that gallant and illustrious son of France, Marshal Ferdinand Foch. We share your sorrow as once we shared with you the distinction of service in a common cause under his able guidance."

Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of the Army staff, cabled to Marshal Petain, inspector general of the French army, as follows:

"On behalf of the Army of the United States I extend to the army of France deepest and most sincere condolences on the death of Marshal Ferdinand Foch. Veterans of our armies ever will hold in gratitude and reverence the memory of that great soldier, under whose illustrious leadership Americans were privileged to assist in the restoration of peace to the world."

Baker Praises Marshal.

Cleveland, March 20 (A.P.).—Apprised of the death of Field Marshal Ferdinand Foch by the Associated Press, Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, who was Secretary of War during the time Foch commanded the armies of the allies and who knew the marshal both in France and in the United States, expressed sorrow at the death of the great French commander.

Mr. Baker said: "Field Marshal Foch was the most brilliant soldier produced by the World War on either side. He was a great patriot and a deeply religious man. With a thoroughly practical view of world politics, he combined a character of deep devotion to high ideals.

"This made him in all purposes one of the most distinguished men of our age."

Tribute of English Chiefs.

London, March 20 (A.P.).—Field Marshal Lord Allenby, leader of the British forces in Palestine which retook Jerusalem, paid tribute to Marshal Foch as a friend and comrade as well as soldier and remarkable strategist.

"I have had the privilege of knowing as a friend and comrade Ferdinand Foch, marshal of France and field marshal of Great Britain," Lord Allenby said.

"Soldier and student expert in the history, art and practice of war, Foch stood forth on the day of trial as the leading strategist and tactician of our time, possibly of all times.

"To his balanced intellect no problem was difficult. No responsibility shook those nerves of steel. Master of every situation, altruistic in devotion to duty, his patriotism saved France and his loyalty carried to victory the cause of the allied nations."

Marshal Foch was described as "probably the only general who would have been acceptable to all governments concerned" in the difficult task of directing the allied armies during the world war, by Field Marshal Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial general staff from 1915 to 1918.

"Marshal Foch was not only professionally well qualified to be intrusted with the command of the allied armies, when it was decided to place them under a single control, but, as further proof of the high esteem in which he was universally held, he was probably the only general who would have been acceptable to all governments concerned," Field Marshal Robertson declared.

"Very Great," Says Dawes.

Chicago, March 20 (A.P.).—"He was the foremost factor in the allied victory and with his passing has gone one of the greatest soldiers of all time," commented former Vice President Charles G. Dawes today on the death of Marshal Foch.

Gen. Dawes, who was in charge of supplies for the A. E. F. in the World War, described the allied generalissimo as one of the greatest figures of all history and said his personality was an inspiration not only to the French army but to other allied armies as well.

"One of the great figures of history has passed away. The affection which Foch inspired, not only in the French army, but in the other allied armies, was a tribute to a personality combining the strength and gentleness possessed only by the very great.

"Millions of his comrades in the American Army will today be bowed in grief. They mourn him as a great friend and beloved commander, who has gone on his last long march."

Hooded Bandits Rob New Orleans Pay Car

New Orleans, March 20 (A.P.).—Four hooded robbers forced a United Fruit Co. pay car to the curb in the business section today and escaped with $4,800 in cash after wounding William Sebatier, 53, a guard. One of the three bullets fired by the robbers clipped off one of Sebatier's fingers.

After the holdup the thieves drove several blocks and their car went dead. With hoods discarded, they forced a chauffeur from his car and continued their escape in it.

BYRD PARTY'S CARGO IS IMPERILED BY ICE

Battle With Widening Crevasses Is Told in Letter From Washington Member.

DOG SLED AND COAL LOST

The hardships suffered in the struggle to save the cargo of the Eleanor Bolling, Antarctic expedition ship of Commander Richerd E. Byrd, from being lost in the giant crevasses spreading through the ice pack at the Bay of Wales, was told of yesterday in a letter arriving here from Charles L. Kessler, of 40 Foxhall road northwest, a member of the crew.

Kessler, former marine and Byrd's companion on both his Arctic and Antarctic trips, said in his letter that the New Zealanders warned members of the expedition of trouble before their dash into Antarctica. The letter, in part, reads:

"Our ship looks anything but seaworthy. Our cargo was perhaps the most general one ever shipped. It consisted of everything from toothpicks to airplanes. In weight we were not greatly overloaded, but greatly so in bulk. Tremendous crates containing the planes had to be carried on deck and this called for a superjob of lashing down. Every passageway was completely filled with gas drums and acetylene tanks.

"You had to do the juggling act when moving fore and aft. That was not all; our cargo consisted of everything imaginable in the way of explosives. Gas was caried in the hole and hatch covers had to be removed every day to allow ventilation.

Deck Cargo Begins to Slip.

"Things went well for the first few days, and then we ran into heavy weather. Our deck cargo began to slip in spite of the lashings, and the situation was anything but pleasant with heavy seas running. We did all that was possible and she weathered the gale with flying colors. All hands were now looking forward to the icepack. Having recently towed the City of New York to the ice, the pack was no novelty, but we were thirsting for a crack at it.

"We were not many days in sighting the great ice barrier, and it reminded me of the chalk cliffs of Dover. On our return trip from Spitzbergen we passed there.

"We were soon moored fast to the ice and unloading began in earnest. It was necessarily slow, however, because the gear had to be pulled or dragged back to safety for fear the ice might carry away. Things moved so orderly that Commander Byrd decided to stack up the cargo on the ice. This would speed up unloading considerably, but might prove costly if the ice broke. That is exactly what happened, and, while we have been lucky from the start, this was the first of several breaks of a lifetime.

Ice Cracks in All Directions.

"The center section of the Ford plane and other miscellaneous gear was on the ice, and she started cracking in all directions. These cracks soon widened into crevasses, and had one occurred directly under the wing section or some of the men working it would have been costly to the expedition. This is the plane especially built for long flights, such as to the pole and back. The other planes would have to be refueled at an advanced base.

"The crevasses widened into small canyons and a once splendid dock became a mass of individual bergs. The lines from the ship were made fast in the barrier itself, and this saved the day. This prevented the ice from drifting entirely free and eliminated the danger of individual bergs capsizing.

Dog Sled and Coal Lost.

"Everybody worked fast and only one dog sled and a few bags of coal were lost. We pulled out into the bay and, when the ice had drifted clear, we came alongside the barrier and once more our anchors were buried in the snow.

"We were getting along famously and had just unloaded and hauled the fuselage of the Ford plane back to comparative safety, when the big slide came. Two men were caught on the edge and came down with it, one a Washingtonian, named Henry Harrison, a meterologist from the Weather Bureau, was lucky and grabbed a rope.

"The falling ice nearly capsized our ship and were it not for the lines to the City of New York, I believe she might have gone over.

"The ice continued to cave in and the ships had to get away. We pulled well into the bay ice and discharged the remaining cargo onto the deck of the City."

Painters' Union, of which he was a member, to try to borrow some money with which to move.

Mrs. Mauck, on the other hand, went to the Department of Labor in an effort to secure employment for her husband. She carried with her a letter from Vice President Charles Curtis recommending Mauck for employment. Interesting himself in the unfortunate couple's plight, Commissioner James F. Dewey, of the United States Conciliation Service, wrote a letter to P. F. Gordon, of 3303 Eleventh street northwest, soliciting employment for Mauck.

Mrs. Mauck said that through the commissioner and Mr. Gordon, arrangements were made for Mauck to go to work Monday.

Mrs. Mauck then went to see Joseph Danhaki, owner of the house in which they lived, and, after explaining that Mauck was to go to work Monday, received a week's extension for the rent from Danhaki.

Finds Mate Unconscious.

Her heart brightened by her accomplishments of the day, Mrs. Mauck purchased some things for an evening meal and hurried home to impart the good turn in events to her husband. However, he was unconscious and never knew.

Mrs. Mauck said that during their struggles for work she appealed to several local charity organizations for assistance, but that the best any of them offered was work for her as a domestic. Her husband, she said, was a Mason and a member of National Lodge, No. 12.

In addition to his widow and four grown step-children, Mauck is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ellen Mauck; a sister, Mrs. Lulu Kimball, both of this city, and other relatives in Richmond, Va., where he was born.

Funeral Is Problem.

Mauck came to this city twelve years ago and was employed as a painter at the Capitol and other Government buildings. While working at the Navy Yard several years ago, Mrs. Mauck said, he fell and injured his back, never fully recovering.

Mrs. Mauck last night was at a loss to make funeral arrangements, stating that she had only a few dollars and that her husband had been obliged to let his insurance lapse.

Lee O. Bryant, master of his Masonic lodge, was notified last night and probably will make arrangements for the funeral.

that region, which said simply: "I am attacking Mazatlan."

Gen. Topete answered with congratulations and stated: "I will attack Naco tomorrow morning."

Mayo and Yaqui Indian soldiers of the rebel army, loaded down with bandoleers, began clambering aboard a train soon after Gen. Topete's announcement had been made. The general said he would consume most of the night placing his troops in position to storm the Naco entrenchments.

U. S. Guns in Place.

Naco, Sonora, Mexico, March 20 (A. P.).—Gen. Cas Gonzales took charge of Mexican federal forces here today, while American troops in a businesslike fashion drew up artillery to positions along the border in what was generally interpreted as a preparation for a clash between Mexican rebels and the federal troops in possession of Naco.

Further indication of an impending military engagement below the Arizona border was seen in the unexpected arrival of Gen. Abelardo Rodriguez, Governor of Lower California, in a federal biplane shortly before noon.

Gen. Gonzales arrived here last night and relieved Gen. Augustino Olachea, who recently took Naco in the name of the government.

Federals continued to assert that a rebel attack was about to take place, pointing to the evacuation of Agua Prieta by rebel troops which, they said, were advancing on Naco. Rebel leaders said that the troops at Agua Prieta, border town east of here, had withdrawn to the hills for machine gun practice.

Clashes Are Reported.

El Paso, Tex., March 20 (A.P.).—A clash between Mexican rebels and federal supporters near Palomas, Chihuahua, in the vicinty of Columbus, N. Mex., the scene of Pancho Villa's raid in 1916, was reported today by S. Franco Urias, commercial and consular agent of the revolutionists in El Paso.

Advices were that a small band of federals attempted to move a herd of cattle across the border into the United States. The rebel garrison at Palomas, recently reinforced, captured the federal soldiers and took the cattle, Urias reported.

The consular agent declared the cattle belonged to farmers in the vicinity of Palomas.

S. Urias also announced that Gen. P. Elias Calles had left his command eral reverses in Leon and Guanajuato, on receipt of advices concerning federal reverses in Leon and Guanajuato. Irapuato is about 150 miles from Mexico City.

Insurgents captured both Leon and the town of Guanajuato, Urias reported he had been advised. All state authorities were reported to have fled to Irapuato.

Rebels Plan Offensive.

With the Revolutionary Army at Jimenez, Chihuahua, March 20 (A.P.), Insurgent leaders today pursued their plan of strategy to lure the government army of Gen. P. Elias Calles further northward into rebel-controlled territory, preparatory to a counter offensive against the federal forces.

Quartered at a new base in this important railroad city, Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar conferred with revolutionary veterans who are familiar with the mountainous area through previous wars in Mexico's revolutionary history.

Officers of the rebel command made no secret of the fact that they considered Gen. Escobar's retreat from Torreon and Escalon to be a part of a campaign to trap the federal army now in possession of Torreon.

Federal forces, they said, are threatened from the rear by rebel troops from the States of Nayarit, Guanajuato, Michoacan, Zacatecas and Jalisco. Gen. Escobar planned to confer with Gen. Marcelo Caraveo, commander of the rebel forces in Chihuahua, in preparation for an offensive toward the south.

The railroad station in Jimenez was crowded with revolutionary sympathizers when the troop trains arrived. The rebel forces are well drilled and equipped. Jimenez is an important railroad point, with plenty of equipment to move the troops on short notice.

HOOVER KEEPS SILENT ON FARM RELIEF PLAN

met here all it would have to do would be to pass, in short order, a plan outlined by the President. Members of Congress were under this impression and because of it they haven't given the matter any too much thought.

Has No Detailed Plan.

But this all seems not to be so. Moreover, it is authoritatively stated that it is not, that Mr. Hoover has no detailed plan in his mind.

It is his attitude that the principles which the Republican party stood for during the campaign are well known to all Republicans, at least, and that it is now up to the legislators to apply these principles to a workable plan.

Members of Congress say that it goes without question that if Mr. Hoover adheres to this hard rule, farm relief will be much longer of enactment than had been expected. In the first place, the agricultural committees of the two houses have nothing upon which to begin work.

Those hardy espousers of the equalization fee are reluctant to turn around now and appear in the vanguard of the forces that opposed it. They would rather tag along with the injured air of having to take the new bill.

There are some indications on Capitol Hill that perhaps things are not as bad as they look. For instance, there are reports that at the proper time a bill which will be generally understood to contain Mr. Hoover's views will appear. There was some talk that Representative Fort, of New Jersey, was slated to prepare such a bill but that the Republican leaders thought he illfitted such a role, coming from industrial New Jersey as he does, and that some one else would probably be selected.

There is some apprehension though that if Mr. Hoover does not exercise an aggressive leadership in the matter that some members may be encouraged to harp on their pet solutions. The Democrats, of course, are expected to make a play for the equalization fee, and without Mr. Hoover actively in the picture, some Republicans might be inclined to go along with them, especially since they can not point to Mr. Hoover as the reason for their abandonment of the fee.

Mr. Hoover's attitude now is tantamount to telling them they are the legislators and that under their constitutional authority they can legislate as they please. Those constituents that want the equalization fee might wonder why if this is the case their representatives do not take advantage of it.

It was Mr. Coolidge's philosophy of government that he should not interfere with Congress and he did not do so. Neither did he worry about what Congress did and did not do.

Those who know Mr. Hoover well insist that this is not really his philosophy, that he is really to be an aggressive leader, but that he has his way of leadership.

Will Talk Over Problems.

For example, he will have Congress to deal with for a long time. His way is not to wield a big stick in the Roosevelt ian way, but to have members of Congress up to see him, ask for their conflicting views and then around the table compose them.

It is necessary now, for psychological reasons, it is said, that he take the outwardly extreme attitude on farm relief. He must get away from some of the stories of his ardent campaign biographers, one of whom told how, when he wanted something accomplished in Europe during his food relief work, he told a high European official to "go to hell." This particular story may have been apocryphyal, but it was one of many which gave the impression that Mr Hoover was to be a cyclone in office.

He has been spending no little time since March 4 trying to dissipate this picture.

MAN SHOT TO DEATH OVER DEBTS OF GIRL

Attacked When He Refused to Pay Typist's Bills He Fired, Says Employer.

TALK WITH HER BARRED

Dallas, March 20 (A.P.).—Attacked with a paper knife because, he says, he would not sign an agreement binding himself to have nothing more to do with his former stenographer, and to pay all her debts, G. B. Pierce, 35 years old, an insurance man, shot and instantly killed Andrew M. Blue, 35, a stationery salesman and son of a minister, in Pierce's office in a downtown building here today.

Pierce was slashed on the neck and was wounded in the left arm with his own pistol. He was released on $5,000 bond on a charge of murder. He is married and has two children. Blue was unmarried.

The paper, which Pierce says Blue tried to force him to sign, involved Miss Irma Tarrant, 21, until last week an employe in Pierce's insurance office. Pierce said Blue wrote the agreement with a pen as the men sat on opposite sides of the desk. It obligated Pierce to have no conversations with Miss Tarrant and to pay her outstanding debts and accounts.

Pierce said he told Blue, "I can't sign that," and quoted the latter as answering with an oath, "You'll sign it or I'll kill you."

Then, Pierce said, the salesman grasped a paper knife and began slashing him.

"I couldn't stand there and let him kill me," Pierce told the authorities. "I grabbed a pistol out of my desk and shot him twice."

To what extent Blue was interested in Miss Tarrant was not learned. Pierce said he didn't think Blue had known the girl more than a week. Blue, it developed, however, had taken her to her former home in Bullard, Tex., last Sunday.

Pierce said he had expressed willingness to give up seeing Miss Tarrant but refused to contract to pay all her obligations.

Blue was the son of the Rev. Henry B. Blue, of Tulhoma, Tenn. He is survived also by a brother, the Rev. Willard Blue, pastor of the Blakemore Methodist Church, of Nashville, Tenn.

Coolidge Is Silent On New York Visit

Lucius S. Storrs Accompanies Him on Trip; Given Ripple of Applause.

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—Calvin Coolidge arrived in New York tonight apparently determined that as a private citizen he shall continue his custom of using words sparingly.

To reporters who accompanied him from his train at the Grand Central Terminal and rode with him in an elevator to a suite at the Commodore Hotel he gave no information as to the purpose of his trip to the metropolis. Mr. Coolidge was accompanied by Lucius S. Storrs, former vice president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and managing director of the American Electric Railway Association since 1925. Mr. Storrs boarded the train at Springfield, Mass.

Only a handful of people saw the former President arrive. He carried a small black bag and wore a blue business suit, dark overcoat and dark felt hat, which he lifted as a ripple of applause came from the onlookers.

Merchants Kill Thief When He Flees Bank

Kansas City, Kans., March 20 (A.P.).—An unidentified robber was slain by neighboring merchants when he attempted to escape after holding up the Industrial State Bank in the Argentine section here today.

The robber entered the bank and presented a card to F. W. Forrester, a teller, which read: "Hold up your hands and give me the money." A cigarette case resembling a revolver was pointed at Forrester, who handed the robber all the money in his cage, $1,706.

Another teller, W. A. Trentz, sounded the vigilante alarm, which is connected with nearby stores. Shop owners seized weapons and fired a volley of shots at the man.

France Suggests Plan For Customs Appraisal

(Associated Press.)

The latest note of the French government in connection with the prolonged negotiations between France and the United States on tariff questions has been received by the State Department and is being studied by department officials.

It was in reply to an American note of October 16 regarding the method of appraising for customs duties French goods imported into the United States. In that document the American Government declined to accept the French suggestion that the appraisal be made by French experts, but agreed to consider any alternative suggestion which the French might offer.

Klein, Commerce Aid, to Quit Vienna

Expected on Arrival Early in April to Take Assistant Secretary Post.

Dr. Julius Klein, head of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Affairs in the Department of Commerce, is expected to return here from Europe early in April and is expected to become Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

He is held in high regard by President Hoover, having been brought to the department by him. Dr. Klein's name, in fact, figured prominently in the Cabinet speculation and there were many persons who thought he would be selected for Secretary of Commerce. When Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce, Dr. Klein was his right-hand man.

He has been attending a meeting of 40 American trade commissioners and commercial attaches at Vienna, which has been studying the question of this country's foreign trade future. He acted as chairman of the meeting.

Fire Destroys 2 Barns; Number of Pigs Burned

Fire of undetermined origin early last night destroyed two dairy barns and a storeroom belonging to C. B. O'Shaughnessy, farmer, at Baillie's Crossroad, Va., 8 miles from Washington. The loss was estimated at $10,000, partly covered by insurance.

In addition to the buildings, several pigs, which were in one of the barns, were destroyed. A quantity of hay, and straw was burned, as were a tractor and other farm implements. Fire engines were called from Falls Church, Ballston, Arlington, Ferrydale, Jefferson District, Potomac and Clarendon. Owing to a lack of water in the vicinity, they were forced to combat the blaze with chemicals.

Father Erasmo Spiriti Ends Sermon Series

Father Erasmo Spiriti, the celebrated Italian missionary priest, will deliver the last of a series of sermons tonight at the Four Day Mission at the Holy Rosary Church, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Large numbers of Italians have attended the sermons which began Monday night. Father Spiriti arrived in this country recently from Italy.

Resale of Graves' Wreaths Exposed

Florist Admits Purchasing Them From Cemetery Aids in Chicago.

Chicago, March 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A racket that borders on the sacrilegious was exposed today by the arrest of a truck driver with a load of beautiful wreaths, flowery crosses, floral pillars and a jumble of roses, violets and carnations. The perfume attracted the police. Frank Schlagel, owner of the Aristo Floral Co., claimed the load. The flowers were collected from graves in the Bohemian Cemetery and were to do duty for the second or third time. The cemetery employes sold them to the florist.

Schlagel, in the Desplaines street court, said it had been his practice for five years to obtain wreaths from several cemeteries and resell them. He did not know it was against the law, he said. According to an ordinance, the cemetery groundkeepers are supposed to gather the wreaths from the graves at the end of ten days and destroy them. Cemetery employes were summoned and the hearing continued.

Former Gov. Fuller May Become Envoy

Selected to Succeed Myron T. Herick in Paris, Is Report in Boston.

Boston, March 20 (A.P.).—The Boston Herald tomorrow will say in a copyrighted story from its Washington correspondent that Alvin T. Fuller, former governor of Massachusetts, has been tentatively selected by President Hoover to succeed Myron T. Herrick, as Ambasador to France.

The Herald says that Mr. Fuller now on his way north from Palm Beach by motor will arrive in Washington Saturday afternoon to be a guest at the White House and adds that the fact that his arrival has been timed to coincide with that of Henry L. Stimson, new Secretary of State, is "hardly by accident."

Apparently the only question yet unsettled is whether Stimson will approve Fuller's choice for the Paris post, the newspaper adds.

Pilot Lands as Flares Fire Field; Saves Mail

Verne Treat, Pitcairn air mail pilot, narrowly escaped death early yesterday morning when he was forced to land in a field near Glenburnie, Md., after landing flares which he dropped had set fire to grass in the field.

He brought his plane down on the flaming field, out of danger, and removed the mail sacks. After reporting his forced landing to Bolling Field by telephone and calling fire apparatus, Treat commandeered an automobile and brought his mail to Washington. Gene Brown, Atlanta-Richmond flier for the Pitcairn Co., flew here and picked up the mail destined for Southern points. He had been brought here by a telephone call while Treat was on his way from the Maryland field.

HOOVER'S VERDICT AWAITED ON COURT

Progress of Root Formula Is Declared to Depend on the President's Attitude.

STIMSON HELD IN FAVOR

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Hoover's verdict on the World Court formula drawn up by Sir Cecil Hurst, of Great Britain, and Elihu Root at Geneva is anxiously awaited as the next major move in the plan to provide for American adherence to the international tribunal. The President's indorsement of the formula is held to be essential to any further progress in the Geneva program.

The anticipated procedure is based on an approval of the formula by the President of the United States, its approval by the council of the League of Nations, at Madrid, at its meeting next June, its approval by the assembly of the league at its meeting next September and its submission to the United States Senate for ratification sometime after December.

In order to start the ball rolling it is said to be essential that President Hoover indorse the formula and make it clear to the nations of Europe that the executive branch of the Government will do what it can toward committing the United States toward acceptance of the new protocol. Without this incentive, the council of the league and especially the 40 odd nations later meeting in the assembly can hardly be expected to accept the formula.

U. S. Assurances Awaited.

These nations, it is explained, are not going to commit themselves and then find that the United States is determined to undo all their work by not accepting the new program. It may be that these nations will not be unanimous in any event and unanimity is essential. But it is virtually certain that there will not be unanimity unless and until some assurance has come of America's favorable attitude.

Secretary Kellogg declined to discuss the World Court developments yesterday. Henry L. Stimson, the new Secretary of State, has arrived in America and will assume his duties in about a week. It is considered probable that his views will be ascertained before there is any extended discussion of the American reaction to the formula. As Mr. Stimson was Elihu Root's former law partner and he is understood to favor American adherence to the court, the assumption here is that the formula will be given a very favorable examination by the new Secretary of State.

The original Root plan, before it was modified by the international jurists, was cabled to Secretary Kellogg and made known to the President. There were indications of its entire acceptability. The changes and new touches added by the skilled pen of Sir Cecil Hurst are now known and there is no sign that the administration regards the formula as materially changed. On the other hand, it is not certain that President Hoover regards the changed formula as entirely satisfactory, and there will be doubt on that score until the President makes his position known.

Opposition in Senate.

As pointed out several days ago by The Post, there are leaders in the Senate who are opposed to the formula and who regard it as unworkable and entirely unacceptable. The immediate question of interest, however, concerns the attitude which the Hoover administration will take, for senatorial opposition will be expected in any event, and the chance for ratification hinges on the prospect of forcing ratification over the protests of senatorial groups which have been hostile all along to American entrance into the court.

In connection with the anticipated statement of the Hoover administration's attitude, there is interest in senatorial quarters as to whether the President will regard the formula, as amended by Sir Cecil Hurst, as changing the Senate's fifth reservation. The position which Mr. Coolidge took and the position which President Hoover is understood to have taken was that the foreign powers must accept America's terms as outlined in that reservation.

Mr. Root's avowed purpose was to bring about acceptance of the fifth reservation and thereby permit the United States to become a member on the terms which America proposed. Under this plan, no advisory opinion could be rendered to the league council by the court in any case where America had or claimed to have an interest. A means of preserving the substance of this all-important reservation but altering the form of making it operative was embodied in the Root formula. But senators at least are not willing to concede that the skilled pen of Sir Cecil Hurst has merely altered the form while leaving the substance intact.

Two Phrasings Compared.

The American reservation provided that the court would not render any advisory opinion without the consent of the United States. The Hurst-Root formula, as adroitly worded by Sir Cecil, provides that the court may render advisory opinions without the consent of the United States, but that if it does so America may withdraw from the court.

Whether the Sir Cecil formula and the American reservation mean the same thing is a matter of conjecture to those who are awaiting developments but senators who interpret the words of the Hurst-Root formula to mean what they say are unable to understand how it can be said that the American reservation has not been changed in a most material way. In the American reservation the right to veto advisory opinions was absolute, senators point out, while under the new formula this right is taken away and in its stead America is given the right to withdraw from the court in protest over the denial of her right to veto. To what extent such withdrawal would embarrass America and subject her to charges of bad faith and disrupting machinery of the international justice has already been commented upon here but, aside from this, the apparent radical difference between the American reservation and the Hurst-Root formula is attracting attention.

There will be a drive initiated here to persuade President Hoover to urge early action by the Senate and there will be the usual drive on individual senators to take up ratification at the earliest possible moment. This may mean an effort to have the extra session deal with the World Court even in advance of acceptance by the other powers but formal notice of acceptance by the other powers appears to be a necessary prerequisite to ratification by the Senate here.

ROOT SEES SUCCESS FOR COURT SCHEME

Believes Nations Sincere in Wish for Adhesion of America.

SAYS INTERESTS ARE SAFE

Geneva, March 20 (A.P.).—Elihu Root, noted jurist, in a statement to the press tonight expressed belief that the United States and all the nations would accept the new protocol for American adhesion to the World Court of International Justice.

He declared his conviction that the cordial expressions by all parties now supporting the court of an evidently sincere wish for the cooperation of the United States justified the hope for favorable consideration of an agreement by them, while the terms of Secretary Kellogg's recent letter to the powers inspired similar hope as to action by the United States.

Mr. Root emphasized that the committee of jurists found that Secretary Kellogg was justified in intimating that there was no real difference on any matter of substance between the signatories of the court statutes and the United States. It was only necessary for the committee to establish a procedure through which the intentions of both the United States and the other nations "about which there is no difference or dispute" could be applied with promptness and celerity in case the United States adheres to the court.

Says Nations Protected.

Mr. Root said that the committee was convinced that the protocol framed will protect the interests of all parties concerned "in the practical application of undisputed principles of action."

It was gratifying, said Mr. Root, that the committee found that in substance the improvements in the statutes which they recommend, consist in changes required by "unexpectedly rapid development of the court's business." They are also based on general recognition of the usefulness of the court in disposing of some critically dangerous controversies. The tendency to resolve these controversies by an appeal to the court has so increased that the court has become almost a continuous tribunal "like the great national courts of the civilized world."

Sees Gain for Court.

"The lessons which the committee has had to apply have been lessons, not of failure, but success," he said. "The recommendations are designed to increase the capacity of the court for meeting this larger demand of its service."

Arnold Raestad, the Norwegian jurist, also issued a statement rejoicing that the committee had found a solution for American adhesion to the court. Scandanavia, he said, wants the United States in the court, but was anxious that the system of advisory opinions should be developed instead of being destroyed. He expressed the conviction that the result showed that the nations need have no apprehensions.

In the view of the entire committee, adherence of the United States will be a great impetus to establishment of the reign of law among the nations.

the sympathetic and wholehearted assistance of the American Red Cross, State and municipal authorities and the help of various Federal Government agencies working through the Red Cross.

Gov Bibb Graves conferred late today with the Alabama delegation in Congress to decide on a program of Federal aid. This is wanted to relieve suffering and to help in rehabilitating the flood-swept sections of the State.

Although the Apalachicola River was more than 2 feet over the Victory Highway Bridge, across the Apalachicola River, vehicular traffic was resumed today, after a raised flooring had been laid.

This gave an outlet to the territory between the Apalachicola and the Choctawatchee rivers.

The Apalachicola at River Junction rose one-half inch an hour. From a normal stage of 3 feet it stood this morning at 35 feet, having inundated the business section from 5 to 10 feet and overflowed the lower residential district.

Measures to safeguard the health of the refugees in camps of northwest Florida and southern Alabama continued receiving major attention from the health authorities. Florida officials announced that the camps at Chipley, Bonifay and in the Caryville district were well in hand.

The Red Cross established a refugee camp on the outskirts of Elba, Ala., in order that the adult citizens might have a base nearer their homes to carry on salvage work. Additional refugees were released from the camps at Troy, Enterprise, Samson and other points to return to Elba and Geneva and take up the rehabilitation work.

Each person was required to have been inoculated and carry sufficient provisions and drinking water before entering the area.

Maxwell Field aviators continued to fly over the flooded territory, carrying provisions and supplies to those in need. They were assisted by planes from Langley Field, Va. Similar work was also done by Navy planes from the Pensacola Station. The Flint River still rose at points in South Georgia as it neared the Florida border. The gauge at Albany measured 34.3 feet, an increase of 1.7 since yesterday. The river stood at 37.6 at Bainbridge.

The Red Cross headquarters in Washington were informed by Charles Smith that he had been unable to catch up with the crest of the flood on the Chattahoochee River in Georgia. He had been directed to go down the river valley in an automobile in order to be assured that the Red Cross chapters were prepared for the emergency. He said that falling bridges, washouts and debris had slowed his progress, but he hoped that by tomorrow he would pass the flood crest.

A survey of the flood district was expected to be made by Henry M. Baker, of Washington, national disaster relief director of the Red Cross.

Montgomery, March 20 (A.P.).—Two loans will be sought from the Federal Government, Gov. Bibb Graves announced today, for the relief of Alabama flood refugees. One will be for immediate emergency aid and the other a long-term loan for rehabilitation purposes.

The governor and four members of the State's congressional delegation discussed plans late today, but delayed action until word is received from each of the State's representatives and senators.

Charles A. Moffett, president of the State board of administration, announced he had placed $31,615 in the hands of Red Cross directors today, representing contributions received from radio appeals by Gov. Graves and through the newspapers. The governor is to make another radio appeal tomorrow night.

Lindbergh to Wed In June, Is Report

Whether Marriage to Miss Anne Morrow Will Be in U. S. Undecided.

Mexico City, March 20 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his fiancee, Miss Anne Morrow, expect to be married some time in the month of June, it is stated upon the highest authority. The place of the ceremony has not yet been decided.

Anne Morrow will be a June bride, but she and Col. Lindbergh have not yet decided whether the marriage shall be solemnized in Mexico City or in the United States. The colonel is expected to fly back to Mexico City at least once, and maybe twice, to visit his fiancee before June.

Miss Morrow's trousseau is now being prepared, though it is not yet completed. The couple will decide nothing further before Lindbergh's return to Mexico City, which is expected to be within a few weeks.

Weak After Operation

"About five months ago, following an operation for appendicitis I did not gain strength enough to be up and about. My mother and sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken five bottles and it has helped me to get strong so I can do my own housework now. I have recommended it to several friends who have been weak and rundown."—Mrs. Oscar Ottum, Box 474, Thief River Falls, Minn.

SENATE VOTE OUSTS OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR

Johnston Is Found Incompetent to Hold Office by Impeachment Court.

the incompleted term, which expires in January, 1931.

Johnston, sitting at the counsel table, appeared unmoved when the removal vote was announced. Mrs. Johnston, sitting at his side, took the verdict in like manner.

After the vote on the charge of incompetency was taken, the nine remaining charges were considered. He was exonerated of all the other charges against him.

Although impeachment agitation had been started against other of Oklahoma's seven governors, Johnston was the second one ever tried and the first to fight his battle to a conclusion.

Jack C. Walton was removed by the Senate in 1923.

Then charges of incompetency and corruption were made against Johnston, a vote on any one of which would have meant his removal.

The chief counts were "general incompetency," based upon the alleged dominance of his office by Mrs. Hammonds, and his clemency acts, and "illegal issuance of deficiency certificates."

Marks End of Long Fight.

A charge of excessive use of power, founded on Johnston's breaking up of an incipient special session against him in January, 1928, by use of troops, was dropped.

Johnston's two years in office were filled with bitter political strife beginning almost from the day he opened his inaugural address with a prayer for Divine guidance.

The factional fight was generally blamed on Johnston's refusal to dismiss Mrs. Hammonds, whom her enemies charge with "running the governor," dictating patronage and highway affairs.

Mrs. Hammonds took over her office as confidential secretary, a capacity Johnston especially created for her, almost simultaneously with his inauguration. Throughout the storms of protest she remained at her post.

She and Johnston had met during their activities in State Democratic politics and likewise during their work with such fraternal orders as the Ku Klux Klan and Kmealias.

Upheld Ku Klux Klan.

Johnston's platform upheld the klan, which order was reported to have withdrawn its support in the latter months of his administration after Johnston indorsed Alfred E. Smith for the Presidency.

In the fall of the year he took office, a crisis developed and numerous house and senate members, led by the so-called "four horsemen of the house," chief opponents of the governor, met in an attempted special impeachment session.

After voting charges against him in a downtown hotel while clad in nightgowns and pajamas, the house was "chased home," but the senate remained to squash the charges in an overnight switch.

A year of dissension and unrest followed. Johnston and Mrs. Hammonds were the center of the legislative revolt which was climaxed when the regular session started this January, and the impeachment effected.

Johnston was indignant. He pleaded not guilty and named his accusers as "disappointed persecutors." Mrs. Hammonds resigned when his trial started.

Van Sweringens Buy Missouri Pacific Stock

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—The Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland, through their newly formed investment trust, the Alleghany Corporaiton, have purchased a block of Missouri Pacific Railroad stock, it was learned today. No attempt to acquire control of the road is contemplated, it was said.

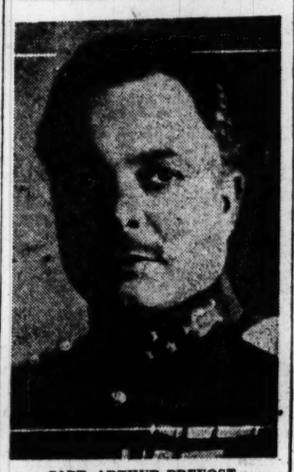
In Wall street it was believed a stock interest might strengthen interchange of traffic relations between the Missouri Pacific and the Nickel Plate, controlled by the Van Sweringen interests.

Inverclyde and Dancer To Be Married Today

London, March 20 (A.P.).—Lord Inverclyde and his financee, June, the dancer, whose name in private life is June Howardtripp, plan to be married tomorrow.

Lord Invercylde secured a license today.

BAND CONDUCTOR



CAPT. ARTHUR PREVOST, Conductor of the Royal Belgian Band.

Parade Scheduled By Belgian Band

Visitors Will Be Welcomed Today by Marines and Prince de Ligne.

When the Symphonic Band of the Royal Belgian Guards arrives at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon it will be greeted at Union Station by the United States Marine Band, as well as by the Belgian Ambassador, Prince Albert de Ligne, and other notables. The Marine Band will play the Belgian national song as the two great bands march down Pennsylvania avenue. Capt. Arthur Prevost will lead the visiting bandsmen.

Prince de Ligne will hold a reception for his countrymen at the Belgian Embassy at 4:30 this afternoon, followed by a dinner to be given by the Marine Band in honor of the visitors at the Congressional Country Club. The Virginia Marine Band will join the other two musical organizations for this affair.

Members of the Belgian Guards will be presented to President Hoover tomorrow afternoon at 12:30 o'clock by Prince De Ligne. From the White House, the Marine and Belgian bands will proceed to Arlington and Mount Vernon. A wreath will be placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by the Belgians. This will be followed by the only concert to be given in the Capital by the guards at Poli's Theater.

Helfand Resigns Right To U. S. Court Practice

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—Marcus Helfand, bankruptcy lawyer, resigned his right to practice in the Federal courts of this district today. The unexpected resignation came just one day before the close of a court hearing at which United States Attorney Tuttle sought to have Helfand debarred from Federal court practice.

Tuttle charged Helfand with misappropriation of receivership funds and with offering for sale the judicial favors of Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow, against whom articles of impeachment have been read in Congress.

Wife and Alleged Suitor Escape Death Penalty

Tallahassee, Fla., March 20 (A.P.).—The State board of pardons today commuted to life imprisonment the death sentences of Mrs. Berta Hall and Goffdon Denmark, convicted in Duvall County for the murder of James Hall, the woman's husband.

Mrs. Hall and Denmark, her alleged suitor, conspired to kill her husband, the State charged at the trial. She was accused of having supplied Denmark with a shot gun for the purpose after Denmark feared he would miss his mark with one bullet from a revolver.

U. S. Marine Is Killed By Nicaraguan Bandits

Managua, Nicaragua, March 20 (A.P.). One United States Marine was killed and another injured March 17 when a Marine patrol encountered a group of bandits in the Jinotega district, the Marine command announced this afternoon.

The man killed was Private Michael Savulich, of Jersey City, N. J., and the man injured was Private James V. Faul, of Baltimore, Md. Faul was shot in the upper right arm and his condition was said to be serious. The shooting occurred near Pavons.

Two Burn to Death In Oil Still Blast

Two Others Seriously Hurt by Blazing Oil at Marcus Hook, Pa.

Marcus Hook, Pa., March 20 (A.P.).—Two men were bruned to death and three others seriously burned early today in a fire at the Sun Oil Co. plant here, after an explosion in an oil still. Scores of workers and firemen were slightly injured and were treated on the scene by physicians.

The dead are: James McAbee, jr., 35, of Marcus Hook, a still operator, and Joseph C. Bennett, 35, Linwood, Pa., a company fireman.

The still which exploded was filled with crude oil in process of "cracking up" into gasoline and biproducts. Eight other tanks, filled with crude and lubricating oils, caught fire.

$100,000 SUIT FILED IN CLEANERS' FIGHT

Dieners Firm Accuses Three Concerns and Five Men With Conspiracy.

HAMPERED TRADE, CLAIM

Three wholesale cleaning and dyeing establishments and five individuals were named defendants in a suit for $100,000 damages filed yesterday in the District Supreme Court by Diener's Cash & Carry Cleaners, Inc., of 1022 Vermont avenue northwest, who complained of violations of the Sherman antitrust act and the Clayton amendment.

The suit followed in the wake of an injunction petition instituted by District Attorney Leo A. Rover recently against a number of cleaning and dyeing establishments, which were accused of plotting restraint of trade through a monopoly of the cleaning and dyeing business in the District. It also was charged that the establishments agreed to raise prices and refused to perform service for retailers who refused to enter the alleged plot.

Named defendants in the suit yesterday were the Vogue Dry Cleaning Co. and Samuel Goldenberg and Meyer Needle, its representatives; the Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc., and John F. McCarron, its representative, and Samuel and Charles Rubenstein, trading as the Rubenstein Cleaning Co.

In January, 1928, it was charged, Goldenberg, Needle and McCarron conspired with other dealers to raise prices on work done for retail firms. When the plaintiffs refused the price raise, it was charged, McCarron threatened to put them out of business.

An attempt to carry out the threat was made in June, it was charged, when the alleged plotters agreed to lower prices charged by retailers in the vicinity of the plaintiff's stores. Refusal to do any work for the Dieners firm was made, it was charged, and the defendant plotted with a manufacturer who performed work for the plaintiffs to shrink and damage the plaintiff's goods.

In September, the complaint alleged, the plaintiff negotiated for the purchase of a dyeing and cleaning plant, which would make the Dieners independent of the wholesalers, but the defendants induced the owners of the plant to sell it to the Rubensteins, who made the purchase simply to hinder the plaintiffs. The suit was filed through Milton D. Campbell and Thomas Patterson, attorneys.

NINETEEN ARE KILLED AS TRAINS COLLIDE

among the dead are, besides Barstead, Brakeman Ferguson, Brakeman White, E. Stutz, express messenger, who died in Parry Sound, and News Agent Miller. Among the injured are Fireman Smith, Brakeman Savage and Baggageman McRoberts.

Some of the fifteen dead in the Colony coach were so badly burned that identification will be difficult. None of the bodies in the car had been identified late today. Most of them apparently met death before the flames reached them. Many of them had fractured skulls, torn limbs and other injuries which would have made death practically instantaneous. One eyewitness said he counted eight fractured skulls.

G. V. Alexander, engineer of the westbound train, jumped from his cab when he saw the crash was inevitable and recovered consciousness under the wreckage of his engine. Engineer Gaureau of the other express remained at the throttle and was lifted injured from the wreckage.

An investigation into the cause of the wreck is under way.

J. M. Nelson's Son Missing.

(Associated Press.)

Representative John M. Nelson, of Madison, Wis., yesterday received a telegram from his son, Harold Nelson, 31, that his younger son and secretary, Robert M. Nelson, 24, was missing in the wreckage of two Canadian National Railway trains at Drocourt, Ontario.

The message, filed from Drocourt, read:

"Robert and myself in railroad wreck at Drocourt. Robert missing. I am okey."

The brothers were en route from Madison to a fishing camp in the Province of Alberta for a vacation.

Crown Prince Weds Today; Carnival Spirit Rules Oslo

Spectacular Fire Thrills Throng Gathered to See Olaf and Princess Martha Enter Theater; Citizens Give Them $55,000.

Oslo, Norway, March 20 (A.P.).—Enthusiasm of the Norwegian people over the wedding of Crown Prince Olaf and Princess Martha continued at fever heat today. A great throng assembled before the royal palace and cheered so vociferously that the royal couple obligingly appeared on a balcony to bow and smile their acknowledgements.

The populace of Oslo was pleased by official forecasts that rain was not likely to interfere with tomorrow's notable ceremony and accompanying festivities.

The great Stavangar wireless station, which is in communication with the United States, will suspend its activities for an hour tomorrow during broadcasting of the wedding ceremony.

The throngs of merry-makers celebrating tomorrow's royal nuptials were thrilled tonight by a spectacular fire in the center of the city which destroyed the biggest warehouse in Oslo.

The crowds which had gathered to see Prince Olaf and Princess Martha arrive at a theater, flocked by thousands to the scene of the conflagration. The loss was estimated at 3,000,000 kroner.

At a reception in the palace the American Minister, Laurits S. Swenson, as dean of the diplomatic corps, presented to the prince and princess a fine tea service in sterling silver on behalf of the corps. Then on behalf of the Norwegian-Americans in the eastern states he presented the prince and princess with a large landscape painted in Maine by the Norwegian artist, Jonas Lee, of New York.

Minister Swenson, pursuant to instructions from the White House, will deliver personal greetings, congratulations and best wishes for the future from President Hoover after the wedding ceremony tomorrow.

The prince and princess were given a riotous greeting when they appeared in the royal box alone and in full view of the audience at the National Theater tonight. King Haakon and Queen Maud sat with the Duke and Duchess of York in a larger box, which had been specially constructed for the occasion.

The play was a lively comedy, "Geography and Love," by the well-known Norwegian author, Bjornsterne Bjornson. Tickets to the performance were in great demand and speculators got huge sums for the cards of admission.

Besides the gifts from the American Minister, the bridal couple received presents from the government and the houses of the Norwegian Parliament. These consisted of a beautiful silver bowl, ornamented with seven shields bearing the arms of the chief Norwegian cities and a silver candelabra adorned with the arms of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Great Britain.

A right practical gift was $55,000 subscribed by the Norwegian people. It was handed to the prince with an illuminated address of affection and loyalty. An enormous crowd assembled in the square outside of the palace while this was going on. The throng raised a persistent chant of "Olaf-Martha," which was roared over and over again until the smiling pair appeared on a balcony and waved.

$50,000 Damages Asked for Arrest

Howe Totten Sues Charles K. Moser After Auto Cases Are Dismissed.

Howe Totten, of 1808 I street northwest, attorney and owner of the Le Paradis Building, instituted suit for $50,000 damages against Charles K. Moser, of 4514 Connecticut avenue northwest, in the District Supreme Court on charges of false arrest.

On August 30, 1928, at Sixteenth and M streets northwest, an automobile driven by Totten struck Moser. As a result, Totten charged, he was arrested on complaint of Moser and held in a police station house for two hours before bond of $500 was posted. He was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor at Police Court, the suit declared, and after hearing all facts in the case Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray entered a nolle prosse of the charge on October 23.

On October 16 Moser swore to another complaint charging Totten with reckless driving, according to the suit. The case was tried and the charge dismissed on December 12. Totten declared he was subjected to humiliation as a result of the charges, and asked balm of $25,000 each for the accusations that were dismissed against him. In connection with the same mishap Totten was convicted of an assault on Moser and given a suspended fine. The suit was filed through Attorney Levi David.

REV. E. T. SHANAHAN DIES.

Had Been Professor of Philosophy at Catholic University.

The death of the Rev. Edmund T. Shanahan, 60 years old, professor of theology and philosophy at Catholic University until 1920, was reported yesterday from Boston.

The Rev. Shanahan came to Catholic University as associate professor of philosophy in 1895. He had studied at Boston College and in Rome, and had taught at Georgetown College and the American College in Rome. He was made professor emeritus in 1922. During the early years of his professorship he lectured on philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania.

DR. PAUL LESSINOFF SUCCUMBS IN PARIS

Bulgarian Diplomat, While Serving Here, Married Miss Elizabeth K. Wheeler.

LONG IN FOREIGN SERVICE

Word was received in diplomatic circles in Washington last night of the death at the American Hospital in Paris yesterday of Dr. Paul Lessinoff, First Secretary of the Bulgarian Legation in London, and formerly First Secretary of the Bulgarian Legation in Washington, where he was stationed for several years.

While stationed in this city his marriage to Miss Elizabeth K. Wheeler, daughter of Mrs. T. Hartley Given, of the Wardman Park Hotel, which occurred at the Bulgarian Legation about four years ago, was one of the notable social events in the recent history of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington. Mme. Lessinoff, who was presented at the Court of St. James last spring, was with her husband in Paris at the time of his death. She was a prominent society girl in Pittsburgh, but had lived in Washington many years.

Dr. Lessinoff was born at Sliven, Bulgaria, in 1884, and after studying law, political science and finance at Leipzig and Munich, graduated in 1909 from the University of Munich. Upon the completion of a year of military service he entered the University of Brussels, where he received the degree of LL.D. He afterward studied in Geneva. At the outbreak of the first Balkan war he entered the Bulgarian army as a lieutenant, and in 1912 entered the foreign office at Sofia and in 1915 went to Constantinople as Third Secretary of the Bulgarian Legation.

He was transferred to the legation at Bern, Switzerland, in 1917, and after again serving at Sofia in 1918, in 1919 he came to Washington as Second Secretary of the Bulgarian Legation, and became First Secretary the following year. He had received numerous decorations from the Bulgarian government and was a member of the American Society of International Law.

Poverty Declared To Retard Chinese

Maj. Gen. Connor Tells Rotary People Too Poor to Take Civic Interest.

Poverty is the greatest evil in China today, Maj. Gen. William D. Connor, commandant of the Army War College, told members of the Washington Rotary Club yesterday at its weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. The poverty of the average Chinese, he said, causes him to reckon only with the problems of the immediate present and prevent his taking an active part or interest in national affairs.

Gen. Connor, who is a member of the Tientsin, China, Rotary Club, described conditions in the republic as he had found them during three years of service there. He pointed out that no one person can know the country as a whole, because of the fact that its people are so widely different in speech, temperament and mode of living.

Albert Schultels, who has been ill for eighteen months, attended yesterday's meeting and received the vociferous greeting of his fellow Rotarians.

District Patriotic Group Elects Hoover Member

President Hoover was elected an honorary member of the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution at a meeting of the society last night. The President was a member of the Pennsylvania State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Dr. Newton Baker addressed the society on the influence of colonies on the development of this country.

Dahlgren Terrace Group Indorses 3 Candidates

The Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association indorsed its president, A. F. Scheer, as a candidate for the Citizens Advisory Council at a meeting last night. William McK. Clayton, of the Brightwood Citizens Association, was indorsed for the Public Utilities Commission.

C. L. Plemmons, captain of the Twelfth Precinct, was indorsed for superintendent of Metropolitan Police, to take the place of Maj. Hesse.

40 SHOTS ARE FIRED IN RAID ON ESTATE

Millionaire's Son Is Believed Object of Attack on McCarthy Home.

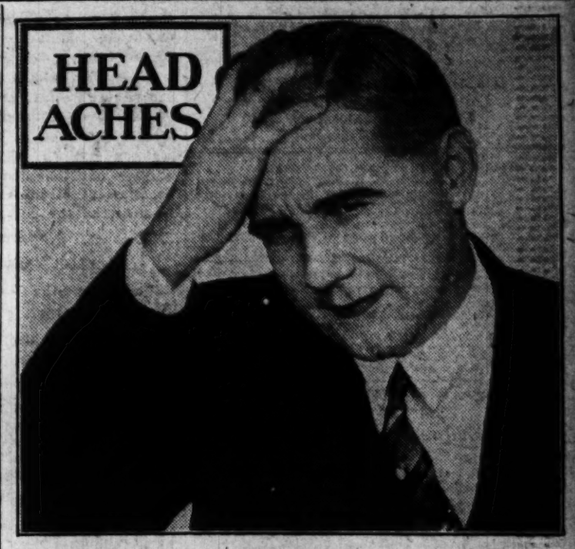
WILL IS FOUGHT OVER

Greenwich, Conn., March 20 (A.P.).—A watchman guarding the estate of Dr. James S. McCarthy, recently heir to several million dollars by the will of his wife, Mrs. Margaret Huntington Smith McCarthy, was fired on today by two men whom he had detected trying to force a door. Whether a burglary was attempted or an effort to kidnap Dr. McCarthy's young son was undetermined.

Since the death of Mrs. McCarthy, whose will involves a battle in probate court when contested by her daughter, Miss Margaret Gowan and others, Dr. McCarthy has employed two watchmen to guard James S. McCarthy, jr., 3-year-old son, who received a bequest of $2,000,000 from his mother's estate.

Early this morning John Sparks, one of the guards, surprised two men who were trying to force one of the windows. Both men opened fire on Sparks and started to run. They hid behind a clump of bushes and Sparks behind a tree and in the ensuing gun battle over 40 shots were fired before the intruders escaped. Examination showed a pool of blood near where the two men had hidden. Sparks is certain he wounded one of the men.

Thomas Sheridan, the inner house guard, heard the sounds of the shooting and called the Greenwich police. According to Sheridan, his instructions from Dr. McCarthy were to guard the young son regardless of what went on outside and he immediately stationed himself in the bedroom of James, jr., with gun drawn and ready for action. Police arrived shortly after the intruders made their escape, but no trace of the two men could be found.



A DOZEN different things may cause a headache, but there's just one thing you need ever do to get relief. Bayer Aspirin is an absolute antidote for such pain. Keep it at the office. Have it handy in the home. Those subject to frequent or sudden headaches should carry Bayer Aspirin in the pocket-tin. Until you have used it for headaches, colds, neuralgia, etc., you've no idea how Bayer Aspirin can help. It means quick, complete relief to millions of men and women who use it every year. And it does not depress the heart.

Among women in business—
an old hygienic problem
solved a new way

Assurance, comfort, poise, fine grooming are made possible for the business woman, at all times . . . because of this new kind of sanitary protection.

SOME women actually feel that a business career would not have been possible without the remarkable discovery named Kotex. This scientific sanitary protection makes possible for women a freedom, an active life never before possible.

In these ways, Kotex answers a vital need: the marvelous filler, Cellucotton absorbent wadding, takes up 16 times its own weight in moisture. Ease of disposability means much, not only in emergency situations but at all times. Kotex is disposed of like tissue . . . as directions in each box explain. And there are certain new perfections which distinguish this as the superior sanitary napkin.

Kotex deodorizes safely, instantly

A process has been discovered whereby each pad deodorizes completely and safely. This formula is considered so important that it has been patented by the Kotex Company. It is, of course, to be found in no other sanitary pad.

No evidence of sanitary protection

Because corners of the pad are rounded and tapered all conspicuous bulkiness has been eliminated. Snug, secure fit is assured.

Cellucotton absorbent wadding comes in layers, which can be adjusted to one's individual need. That is a unique advantage which women always find comforting. Then, too, there is an easy softness about both gauze and filler. Manufacturing refinements keep adding to your comfort.

SUPER-SIZE KOTEX
Formerly 90c—Now 65c
Some women find Super-size Kotex a special comfort. Exactly the same as the Regular size Kotex, but with added layers of Cellucotton absorbent wadding.

Buy a box of Kotex today. It is 45c for a box of 12 at any drug, dry goods or department store; also obtainable through vending cabinets in restrooms by West Disinfecting Co.

MARSHAL FOCH.

Death has ended the eventful story of Marshal Foch's life, and he takes his place among the immortals. He commanded the largest armies in the history of the world. From his brain emanated the impulses that moved these armies like one man, making of them a force that shattered kingdoms and empires.

When the Germans delivered their supreme attack on March 21, 1918, and nearly separated the French and British armies, grim necessity compelled the allies to unite their forces under one command. Lloyd George and Clemenceau had done their best to accomplish this before the German onslaught, but opposition in the British army had checkmated them. The imminent danger of a collapse forced the issue. Then Clemenceau and Lloyd George took the responsibility of placing Gen. Ferdinand Foch in supreme command. President Wilson and Gen. Pershing had long before that time perceived the necessity for unified command, and they readily accepted Gen. Foch as generalissimo.

Gen. Foch's first task was to stand off the attacking Germans. They redoubled their efforts to break through, and in July they reached their greatest advance on the Marne. But Foch was organizing for a counterstroke, which he delivered on July 18—the beginning of the end. By a series of attacks he rolled back the German armies in August, September and October. Under the genius of Foch the allied armies were irresistible.

The world will never cease to marvel at the workings of the brain that brought about victory in the World War. The vastness of the field and the complexity of the factors involved were seemingly beyond comprehension; but Marshal Foch coordinated all these multitudinous factors and formed of them a spearhead that drove into the vitals of the enemy. His achievement gives him rank among the greatest intellects of all time.

Marshal Foch was a simple-hearted, loyal, kindly man, whose daily life before, during and after his supreme effort gave little indication of his greatness. His manner was vivacious and his speech piquant, as became a Frenchman. His mind was liberal and open to suggestion, but he clung tenaciously to his convictions. He was the incarnation of France at its best, and of course he won the hearts of Americans.

The gratitude of free nations will forever keep fresh and green the memory of Ferdinand Foch.

COMPETITION IN COMMUNICATIONS.

It now appears that negotiations looking toward a merger between the Radio Corporation of America and the Western Union Telegraph Co. have been abandoned. "The Radio Corporation has nothing we now wish to use, and if we ever need anything they have we can get it from other sources," said Newcomb Carlton, president of Western Union. Be that as it may, it is probable that the real reason why the conversations were called off lies in the fact that the provisions of the White act can not be circumvented. The law specifies that there shall be no mergers between wire and wireless companies. Unless the law is amended or rescinded the existing communications companies must preserve their individual identities.

The Radio Corporation, through its newly formed subsidiary, R. C. A. Communications, is prepared to challenge the supremacy of the old-line telegraph companies. The corporation has on file before the Radio Commission a request for the assignment of 67 radio frequency channels upon which it proposes to establish a Nation-wide domestic service. In addition it controls certain frequencies in the international band which it expects to use under certain conditions in domestic service, making a total of 148 channels it can make available for intercity service. Mr. Carlton said in his statement of Monday that "there is no known method by which a comprehensive system of radio can be made available for the competent handling of a substantial part of a national service," but Radio Corporation engineers are confident that a satisfactory method of utilizing radio for this purpose has been devised.

The communication services of the Nation are in a transitory stage. The Radio Corporation has come to occupy an important position in the field of international communication, and it feels that the time has arrived when it must provide for the domestic distribution of its transoceanic messages and the collection of traffic originating inland addressed to Europe. Western Union, for the time being, is content to depend on its cables for the transmission of international matter, but if Radio should succeed in setting up a domestic collection and distribution system Western Union may find that the popularity of its cable service will be lessened. This will unquestionably transpire if Radio is able to cut the cost of international messages. In the meantime, the Mackay interests and the Universal Wireless Co., of Buffalo, the latter controlling a considerable number of frequencies, are working upon plans for the establishment of domestic communication systems, and the telephone company, through advertising and rate reductions, is steadily increasing the volume of "long-distance" telephone traffic. An element of intense competition seems to be entering the communication field.

SENATOR CARAWAY APPROVES.

Following the election last November Democratic leaders found their chief consolation in manipulating the returns to show how they could have won had small numbers of votes here and there been transferred to their candidate. Since then various means of making defeat easier have been found, but the latest attempt is the pronouncement of Senator Caraway that President Hoover is more of a Democrat than a Republican.

"Mr. Hoover at one time was thought to be a Democrat," he says. "The Republicans accepted him reluctantly, fearing he still was one. Apparently their doubts were not without foundation." He sees in the first two weeks of the administration indications that the traditions of the Republican party are being forsaken and that Democratic doctrine is about to come into its own. He is confident that his party may look forward to great influence with the new administration.

Senator Caraway finds sufficient justification for his belief in the appointment of Secretary of the Navy Adams and Attorney General Mitchell, to whom he refers as Democrats; in the moderate tariff policy Mr. Hoover is sponsoring; in the oil conservation policy, and in the decision to make statements on large income tax refunds available to the public. Likewise he finds that "the President's declaration that he is going to enforce all laws is also good Democratic doctrine."

If Democratic leaders find consolation in this line of reasoning, they are entitled to it. But it is not to be expected that Mr. Hoover will in any way alter his policies or program of public service because they are interpreted as Democratic. Senator Caraway's statements might be turned about to show how little difference there actually is between many of the principles of the two major parties. But it is nearer the truth to say that the President is putting his constructive policies into effect with no attempt to classify them as Republican or Democratic. To the great advantage of the Nation, the President is a man who acts on his convictions, and is not seriously hampered by ancient traditions in politics which are not applicable to current problems. There is no danger that such a policy will react against his standing in the Republican party. On the other hand a constructive policy, based on the actual needs of the country, is calculated to strengthen the position of the President and his party. It is commendable to find the Democrats in harmony with the President's views, but they will have a difficult time claiming credit for the achievements of his administration.

UNIFORM AIR SAFETY LAWS.

As a result of the airplane accident at Newark last Sunday a sentiment has developed in the New Jersey Legislature for the enactment of regulatory legislation. "Nothing has been done by New Jersey to protect the lives of flying people in the State," says Senator Simpson. He suggests that there be created a State commission which would have general supervision over aviation, particularly over the licensing of pilots and planes.

It is to be hoped that New Jersey will be stirred to this action. The Government has supervision over airplanes only in so far as they are engaged in interstate traffic and until the States adopt legislation to regulate aircraft used within their borders there will be unsafe planes and incapable pilots. The Newark accident, it is true, involved a licensed plane and pilot, but the tragedy serves as a stimulant to State action.

Two measures are before the Maryland Assembly having to do with aircraft regulation. Both are opposed by flying clubs and prominent aviators, on the ground that they seek to place the regulatory power in the hands of the motor vehicle department, which is not competent to deal with it. It is generally admitted that laws of this sort are worse than no laws whatsoever. New York State a year or so ago adopted a model State regulatory measure. It specifies that the regulations of the aviation branch of the Department of Commerce are applicable to all aircraft flown in the State, and it gives to the State police authority to enforce the Department of Commerce code.

The Department of Commerce code is admirably drawn. All the States should adopt legislation providing for its enforcement by State authority.

THE LINCOLNSHIRE HANDICAP.

When, in December last, the Lincolnshire Handicap received an entry of 77 horses, a record for that particular race, it was generally supposed that the field in the actual contest would also prove to be a record, and this forecast was borne out by the event. Yesterday, for the first of the great English spring handicaps, there were 35 competitors, a greater number than ever before faced the starter in the 73 years during which this famous race has been decided over the straight Carholme mile.

A whole month of solid frost in the British Isles interfered seriously with training operations, and one result was the elimination of all the top weights. The greatest weight carried in yesterday's contest was 111 pounds, and the first, second and third all came from the lower part of the handicap. The winner, Elton, carried only 100 pounds; the second, Athford, only 102, and the third, Miscou, only 95. It is also noteworthy that these three were all 4-year-olds.

The race was sufficiently exciting, for the winner scrambled home in front by the narrow margin of a short head, with a length and a half between the second and third. That glorious uncertainty of the turf which has become proverbial was also forcibly illustrated. The winner, never once mentioned in the antepost betting, started at the highly remunerative odds of 100 to 1 against, and the second, quoted earlier this week at 40 to 1, actually started at 33 to 1 against, while the third was one of two favorites on Monday last, each listed at 9 to 1 against.

The increasing interest taken by women in English racing is shown by the fact that Elton is owned by Mrs. R. W. Foster, who thus follows in the footsteps of Lady Queensberry, whose Royal Bucks was successful ten years ago, and of the Duchess of Montrose, whose all-scarlet "Manton" colors were to the fore on Oberon in a now dim and distant and nearly forgotten past.

The venue is now changed from Lincoln to Liverpool, where the Grand National Steeplechase is set for decision tomorrow, with high hopes, which may or may not be realized, for the victory of some one of six or seven American-owned competitors in this greatest of cross-country events.

EXCHANGE OF WITNESSES.

Governors of New York and eight adjacent States are asked to participate in a conference which would have as its purpose the promotion of legislation to permit the interstate exchange of witnesses in criminal cases before those cases are tried in court. The request is made by ten associations of grand jurors in New York, and represents an effort to make prosecution more effective.

At present prosecution officials are often hampered in securing an indictment of a criminal when witnesses live outside the State in which the crime was committed. Existing statutes provide for subpenaing witneses from other States in criminal actions before the courts, but fail to make such testimony available for initiation of criminal action by indictments or warrants. For this reason many guilty persons escape prosecution, and many will continue to do so as long as witnesses keep out of the reach of grand juries by remaining out of the State.

The grand jurors' associations recommend the enactment of identical laws in the various States, providing that where important witnesses are out of the State depositions may be taken, as in civil actions, and used to initiate criminal proceedings. It is pointed out that such a measure would not violate the defendants' constitutional rights to be confronted by accusing witnesses, because no such right exists prior to the issuance of a warrant by a magistrate or an indictment by a grand jury.

The proposed law would tend to bring criminals to book and is certainly a step in the right direction. There seems to be no reason for limiting the conference to the northeastern States, but if this group could come to an agreement other States could follow their example.

A GERMAN PLEA.

By DR. HUGENBERG,
Chairman of the German National People's Party.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without foreign help Germany is unable to support the burden of the payments made till now. It is indeed only through the loans extended to Germany—chiefly by America—that the payment of the German tributes have been achieved. As a matter of fact, Germany has not been able to pay any amount whatever out of her own resources since the Dawes agreement. The Americans are therefore paying the burden of tributes imposed upon Germany. It is the Americans who—no doubt bona fide, but none the less really—finance French militarism and furnish to England the means for building her warships. It is the Americans also who furnish to German Marxism the means for making socialistic experiments in administration and economics.

Germany is gradually losing her financial substance through the drain of the tributes paid by her through loans. It is a downright lie to pretend that Germany's prosperity is increasing, as it is a downright lie to declare Germany to be capable of paying. The accumulating burden of her debts is, in the end, destructive of these very loans and also of German currency. It is thus—also in regard to the capital invested in Germany—not in the interest of the United States to countenance the settlement of annuities exceeding Germany's capacity to pay.

The German National People's Party desire a reasonable and equitable solution of the problem of tributes and of the questions arising out of it. A revision standing for the final solution must remain within the principles proclaimed by President Wilson in his fourteen points on the basis of which the German people laid down its arms. It must needs be based upon Germany's economic capacity and it must take into due account all that Germany has already paid to her creditors. It is only an equitable final solution that will enable Germany to fulfill the task imposed upon her by her geographical position, the protection, that is, of the civilized world against bolshevism—a task toward the fulfillment of which the cultured, well informed and progressive elements of the world ought indeed to act unanimously. If, through unreasonable policies and unbearable burdens, Germany be driven to despair, she will also be driven into the arms of bolshevism. Not until then is Germany likely to become a menace to the world.

Socialism is the first step to bolshevism. Therefore the German Nationalists represent the only bulwark against chaos. Our particular cause is also the cause of all those members of a nation who desire to fight chaos. If, through an unreasonable settlement of the tribute question, our combat against it is frustrated, there will be an irruption of chaos into Germany as well as into Europe, an event which might endanger the entire civilized world. For bolshevism and socialism are not a special product of Russia, but a soul disease on industrial mankind which can, like the grip, travel across oceans.

"Our cause is also yours!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Lincoln's Desk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A rare treasure has been received at Lincoln Memorial University for the Lincoln room. It is the desk used by Abraham Lincoln during two sessions of the legislature of Illinois at Springfield. The desk was the property of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, and is certified and authenticated by affidavits given by Jacob Bunn and other intimate friends and associates of Lincoln.

For years the desk was on exhibition in the First National Bank of Springfield, Ill. Fire made its removal necessary, and then Gov. Lowden, friend and contributor of Lincoln Memorial University, took possession of it.

Helping to Make the World Dry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Steadily and surely the United States is drying up, in spite of the vicious and criminal opposition to the law. Other nations are watching America's progress toward sanity, and the movement to make prohibition world-wide is gaining ground.

America must take the lead in this crusade to save the world from the curse of drink. When we are in the World Court and the League of Nations we can exert a more powerful influence, as we shall be sitting at the common council table. The better elements in the nations are eagerly waiting for our help. It is America's duty to serve. Our wonderful prosperity, due to prohibition, gives us means to help less progressive countries on the path to prohibition.

The progress of Calles over the rebels in Mexico is another sign of the steady march of temperance against fanaticism and crime. Calles is a teetotaller, which accounts for his undeviating devotion to high ideals.

The United States can help world prohibition by refusing to sanction loans to countries that are not taking steps to wipe out this monstrous evil of drink. Countries that promote prohibition have a right to expect special favored nation treatment from America. Not a dollar of American money should go to a nation that legalizes alcohol monopolies. E PLURIBUS UNUM.

The Headlight Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Better Headlights Needed," strikes the root of the evil. But can illuminating engineers correct it? Facts show they are powerless to do so. Last year the Wisconsin Industrial Commission tackled the problem from a different angle. The facts may interest your readers.

It is a two-headed problem—first, the headlight design, an engineering one, and second, the proper use of service problem. Your editorial premise suggests correct design is the panacea. The wonderful work done by automobile builders, bulb and headlamp makers and the indefatigable efforts of the engineering societies such as the Society of Auto Engineers, Illuminating Engineers Society, the National Auto Chamber of Commerce, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, American Automobile Association, National Safety Council and, lastly, that important body, the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Commissioners, has, through the United States Bureau of Standards and electric testing laboratories, greatly improved the brand of lamps. Then consider this development in the light of the following facts:

New cars are the only channel through which new headlights can be put on the road. How many new cars are sold each year? According to Automotive Industries, only 3,574,000 during 1928 out of a total registration of 21,316,657, or only one-sixth. What about the other five-sixths that are over a year old? Aren't they the big problem?

Illuminating engineers will tell you the best designed headlamps require service within a year if they are to give adequate light. But where can one get this service today? Wisconsin is establishing stations where complete lighting service can be obtained. The service is gauged photometrically. A premium is put on good light and competent workmanship. Statistics covering over 50,000 cars show that less than 10 per cent had good lights, 22.4 per cent needed a pair of new bulbs, 32.3 per cent had to have tarnished reflectors polished, 12.3 per cent had poor electrical connections, 4 per cent needed new wiring, 15 per cent new lenses, 3.7 per cent new reflectors, but less than 1 per cent new headlamps.

The average cost for labor and material to put adequate illumination on the cars of Wisconsin motorists was only $1.15 per car.

Let me ask this, if 99 per cent of the cars can get safe lights for about a dollar, why put this problem up to the illuminating engineers now? At the best they can only correct one-sixth of the cars. Why not start with the five-sixths that we are complaining about today? Put a premium on good light and competent service men will soon make night driving a pleasure instead of a hazard that is as much a threat to the growth of the automobile business as are our inadequate and congested highways.

The Failure's Recipe for Rabbit Stew Is: "First Make a Blueprint."

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IN the fever-infested jungles of Central America, a certain man who was called an outlaw hid from other men in uniform.

The men in uniform were equipped with the most accurate and destructive of weapons and led by experts schooled in strategy.

Planes loaded with high-explosive bombs sailed safely among the clouds while sharp eyes watched the earth beneath.

Where the jungle ended in a harbor, battleships rode at anchor, and other ships lay waiting to discharge their cargoes of ammunition and supplies for the fighting men in uniform.

So many guns! So much marching and drilling! So much expense! And still the man who was called an outlaw lay hidden somewhere in the jungle.

Then one day a young man appeared out of the north and reported for duty.

He was a man who knew little of organized strategy and cooperation and cared less for the sacredness of system.

He stepped into the jungle and disappeared. A few days later he came back, walking a little in the rear of a stranger whose hands were fastened together.

The stranger was the outlaw.

One man had succeeded where organized thousands had failed, and the secret of his success was his refusal to make a big job out of a small one.

"You want this man caught, eh? Very well; I'll go get him." That was all. What could be simpler or more obvious.

A great many moderns fail in business and in their private ambitions because they consume too much energy and time in making great preparations for small tasks.

System throttles them. They are hobbled by the machinery of efficiency. And they devote weeks to the business of preparing blueprints and estimates and holding conferences to accomplish something that one sensible man might do in a day.

"The way to resume specie payment," said a common man who was President, "is to resume."

Ignorance of that simple truth keeps millions of incompetents forever fluttering in circles.

The genius isn't unlike other people, except that he clears his mind of unessentials and gets results in the direct and obvious way.

The way to do anything is to go ahead and do it; but men born to fail never learn that lesson. They spend their lives making plans because they feel more important and efficient when they make big jobs out of little ones.

THE MIGHTY CAMERA.

If the pen be mightier than the sword, the camera, an Englishman has written, is stronger than either, observes the Boston Transcript. The click of the shutter cuts privacy to the quick. For the cinema it spreads out the spoils. Relentless reels display each gesture, make permanent record of the most transient flicker. So that little imagination is needed to know the ordeal which New England's Charles Francis Adams faced after he had become the Nation's Secretary of the Navy. "The 'shooting,'" says an excellent account in the Globe, "went on for almost a half hour. The picture men asked him to sit at his desk. They snapped him standing, sitting down, leaning over, writing, talking, rearranging papers, sitting closer and sideways."

Here was a painful commencement, indeed, for a man of distinguished and reticent taste, accustomed to feel confident, at past commencements, that every camera had been denied entrance, under rigid police orders, within the high walls of Harvard yard. A true Bostonian now faced, headon, the forces of ballyhoo. He met them, and dealt with them, in the line of duty. Aware that behind the shutters, beyond all the clap-trap, there were, after all, the sober eyes of the American people, he endured what a public officer must endure.

And then, asked by another photographer to "please be writing something on a sheet of paper, Mr. Secretary," he wrote on the sheet, "This is hell.—C. F. Adams." Thus seeking to express his displeasure with ballyhoo, he made himself, all unconsciously, more prominent in the news from Washington than any other member of the Cabinet. He wrote an exceptional headline. If he goes on with this, he will capture the interest of the whole Nation. A real personality is still mightier even than the camera.

PRESS COMMENT.

Another If.

Dallas News: Prohibition would be a complete success if it were not for those who sell liquor to get money and those who buy it to get funny.

No Hope.

Buffalo News: There isn't much hope for temperance in drinking when people can't even be temperate in their discussion of it.

Only an Echo.

Boston Transcript: President Hoover makes it plain that the cry, "To the victors belong the spoils" is, in these later days, nothing but an echo.

More Than $7,000,000.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Yale has a research fund of $7,000,000 to try to explain human conduct. Think how much it'll take to change it!

What, Indeed?

Philadelphia Inquirer: An Arkansas woman has sued her husband because he "plays golf too much." Query from chorus of addicts: "What is too much golf?"

Expensive Either Way.

Philadelphia Record: "It costs a lot to be President," writes Mr. Coolidge. On the other hand, there's a Democractic deficit to say that its costs a lot not to be President, too.

Probably Not.

Ohio State Journal: The White House has 14 bathrooms, but from what we know of government supervision and control we don't suppose the plumbing works very well.

Joan or Carrie?

Brooklyn Eagle: The drys evidently regard Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt as prohibition's Joan of Arc. The wets think of her as a Carrie Nation. Probably no woman in history was ever more widely misunderstood.

Pity the Turk.

Minneapolis Journal: The new Turks are very well pleased with the practical abolition of polygamy, though it is still somewhat difficult to go anywhere in Turkey without running into a lot of Past Grand Master Mothers-in-Law.

Isn't She.

Houston Post-Dispatch: A husband in Memphis and a husband in Houston died Wednesday because their estranged wives refused to make up with them. A wife is a mighty fine thing to have about the home.

Add Definitions.

Detroit News: A man is some one who telephones from a drug store where a phonograph is playing on the candy counter, and wonders why his wife laughs sourly when he says he is staying in to work.

They All Fall.

New York World: They continue to come, the letters proving to us that Gene Tunney indorsed Nujol. But only three contribs have told us that Lindbergh is not the lone nonrecommender. For, after all, he indorsed Hoover.

Advancing Spring.

Baltimore Sun: Spring's majesty is confirmed by the news from Washington that the Japanese cherry trees will be in blossom on April 5; for the date fits exactly into the vernal schedule as promulgated in the State of New York. There the Arbor Days are to be the 12th of April in the southern counties, the nineteenth for the middle tier and the twenty-sixth for those facing Canada. Thus does spring sweep northward week by week. Unaffected by vagaries of local weather, the season of new growth owes allegiance only to the primeval forces that swing the earth in its orbit. Changeable April may be, but never trifling.

How to make canned vegetables even more appetizing

The taste of nearly all good foods is improved with sugar

SCIENCE now knows that the great majority of the canned fruits and vegetables on the market today are rich in vitamins.

This is great news to all who wish to be well fed and healthy. In order that your family may relish these healthful foods, be sure that they are served in the most appetizing way possible. For example, add one level teaspoonful of sugar to one can of corn when heating it for serving. One rounded tablespoonful, at least, of sugar should be added to one can of tomatoes to develop the taste and make them palatable and delicious. The flavor of canned peas is improved by adding one-half to one teaspoonful of sugar to each can, and for string beans add one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful per can. The general rule is that all canned vegetables should be sweetened to taste so that they will be more enjoyable.

As a nationally recognized medical authority says, . . . "canned tomatoes after three years were as rich in vitamins as raw tomatoes . . . canned strawberries were also found to equal raw strawberries in vitamin content." He names numerous other canned fruits and vegetables and all were found rich in vitamins.

Welcome the canned foods to your table. To do so is to welcome health to your home. Eat plenty of varied, nourishing foods sweetened for taste and zest. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

REALTY MEN HEAR SALES DISCUSSIONS

Two Officials of the National Board Drill Capital Agents on Closing Deals.

LAUD WASHINGTON GROUP

More than 400 Washington real estate salesmen and brokers yesterday received expert advice on the more modern methods of real estate salesmanship, at a unique "sales convention" conducted at the Willard Hotel by the Washington Real Estate Board. At morning and evening sessions, the local realtors were drilled as to proper preparation for a sale and methods of closing it, maps, charts and diagrams as aids in selling, and methods of building a clientele.

William E. Herren, director of the extension department of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, one of the speakers, told the group that the present real estate market is a "buyers market." He said that only 30 percent of the current real estate sales are being transacted in the cities. Paying special tribute to the Washington Real Estate Board, he said that it is of more actual service to its members than any other real estate board in the United States.

The convention also was addressed by John Berge, counselor of the National Association, who, like Herren, spoke at both morning and evening sessions. He discussed the merits of charts and diagrams in real estate salesmanship, offering a formula for properly closing a sale. Both speakers were introduced by Ben T. Webster, president of the Washington Real Estate Board.

The special committee in charge of arrangements at the convention comprised Harry A. Seay, chairman; John F. Webster, Joseph A. Petty, Henry K. Jawish, Karl E. Jarrell, Paul D. Crandall, Howard A. Schladt, David E. Barry, Joseph A. Herbert, jr.; Albert E. Landvoigt, Maurice Shapiro, J. G. Beitzell, William M. Throckmorton, Joseph A. Sullivan, jr., M. P. Canby and Horace Browning.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau.
Washington, Wednesday, March 20—8 p. m.

Forecast—For the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia—Fair with mild temperature Thursday, followed by rain Thursday night or Friday; colder Friday; increasing south and southwest winds, shifting to northwest Friday.

Pressure remains low from Greenland south-southwestward to Maine and Nova Scotia and over the Hudson Bay region. Godhavn, Greenland, 28.98 inches, and Harrington, Que., 29.50 inches. The disturbance that was central over Alberta Tuesday night has moved rapidly southeastward to Minnesota, Minneapolis, 29.36 inches, with a trough extending southwestward to New Mexico, and the Arizona disturbance has moved southeastward to the lower Rio Grande Valley, Brownsville, Tex., 29.74 inches. Pressure is low also over Alaska, British Columbia, and the Mackenzie Valley, Dawson, Yukon Territory, 29.44 inches. These disturbances have been attended by rains within the last 24 hours in the Lake region, the Ohio Valley, the interior of the North Atlantic States, Florida, Texas, and from the North Pacific coast eastward to the northern Rocky Mountain region. Pressure is relatively high over California and Nevada, and from the South Atlantic States eastward over the ocean, and over the region northwest of Hudson Bay. Eureka, Calif., 30.24 inches, and Hamilton, Bermuda, 30.10 inches.

The eastward advance of the Minnesota and Texas disturbances will be attended by increasing cloudiness over the States east of the Mississippi River Thursday, followed by showers in the lower Lake region, the Ohio Valley and Tennessee by Thursday night, and in the Atlantic States during Thursday night or Friday. The temperature will rise in the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Lake region Thursday, and it will fall quite generally east of the Mississippi River, except along the South Atlantic coast.

COUPLE IN ARMORED HOME SLAIN IN BED

Machine Gun Gangsters, in Astoria, N. Y., Smash Down Plated Door.

CONVICTS' REVENGE SEEN

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—Several gangsters battered their way into the armor-plated home of Sam Sacco in Astoria today and killed Sacco and the wife he had married last summer after completing a prison term for murder.

Apparently, Sacco had known he was walking in the shadow of death, for he had sheathed the door of his apartment with heavy pieces of iron and had equipped it with strong bolts. But the gangsters smashed the door down while Sacco and his wife were still in bed and opened fire. Sacco died with his revolver in his hand. His wife was killed as she lay in bed.

Police believed the shooting was a case of the underworld taking the law into its own hand against one who had done the same thing himself years ago.

Betrayed Prison Break.

Although at first police were convinced that the double slaying was the result of Sacco's killing of a man named De Lucca, investigation of his prison record soon suggested another possibility. Last summer, it was learned, Sacco tipped off the authorities at Sing Sing that other convicts were planning a break for liberty. As a result of his information the prison break was frustrated.

To protect him from reprisal it was kept secret that Sacco had informed on the convicts, but he was suspected by his fellows and when he was released he was marked for death.

The Sacco apartment is on the first floor of the building and the attack was made while most of the tenants were at breafast or leaving for their daily work.

The sound of the crashing door and the enusing fusilade was heard throughout the building and tenants telephoned police that a shooting was in progress. Before police arrived Sacco and his wife had been killed and the gunmen had disappeared.

Avenged Brother's Death.

In 1917 Sacco's brother Joseph was killed. A man named De Lucca was arrested and questioned but finally released. Sacco would not accept the decision that De Lucca was innocent. De Lucca was killed and Sacco received 20 years for second-degree murder.

With good behavior allowance, he completed his time last summer, and shortly after regaining his freedom he married and took the apartment in Astoria. He took all possible precautions against possible revenge, lining his door so that bullets could not penetrate it and strengthening the locks. But all his precautions were in vain. Sacco died under a storm of bullets that led police to believe a machine gun might have been used rather than pistols.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

MARCH 21.

ONE of the most famous of women musicians, Lady Wilma Maria Francisca Halle, European violinist, was born this day, 1840, in Moravia.

Lady Halle first received her training from her father, who was organist at the cathedral. Her first big success came in 1864, when she made her debut in Paris. Thenceforth her tours were a succession of triumphs. American music lovers heard her when she visited this country in 1899.

The famous German-English author, Mathilda Blind, was born this day, 1841. Her best known works include "The Prophecy of St. Oran," "Life of George Eliot," "Madame Roland," "The Heather on Fire," "Ascent of Man," "Drama in Miniature," "Songs and Sonnets" and "Birds of Passage."

Antonia Coetana de Palva Pereira Maury, American astronomer, was born this day, 1866. She is noted for her work on the classification of stellar spectra and spectroscopic binaries. She is the author of "Classification of Spectra of Bright Northern Stars."

5-Ton Statue of La Follette Is Crowding Statuary Hall

Proposal Made Building Be Erected Where Each State May Have Room for Favorite Sons in Bronze or Marble and Flags.

A five-ton statue of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, was moved into statuary hall at the Capitol yesterday, and the congestion in that historic chamber became more acute than ever.

Each State is entitled to place two statues in the hall. Today there are 57 there, which means that there are 39 more to come. What is to be done with these 39 additional statues?

They can't all be crowded into statuary hall, for the silent figures in bronze and stone that already are there seem to be jostling each other now. Some of them are completely crowded from view.

It has been suggested that the additional statues might be placed in the corridors outside the hall, but this undoubtedly would bring protests from the States whose statues were so located. Capitol officials think that the best suggestion is the one for a seperate building, a sort of hall of fame in which each State would have a room for its statues, flags and so on.

The statue of Senator La Follette, which was executed in Paris by Jo Davidson, shows "Fighting Bob" in a characteristic pose, leaning forward, hands clenching the arms of his chair in the Senate, and seeming about to leap to his feet.

The statue now is located directly in front of the statue of Father James Marquette, the Jesuit explorer, who, with Louis Joliet, discovered the Mississippi River at Prairie du Chien, Wis., in 1673. A stormy fight took place before Wisconsin was able to put this statue in the Capitol.

The La Follette statue will be unveiled April 25 and a large delegation of officials and friends will come here from Wisconsin for the occasion.

TWO WOMEN CLAIM FOOTE AS HUSBAND

Divorce Decree for Pilot of Tragic Plane Not Final, One Says.

HAS CHANCE TO RECOVER

Newark, N. J., March 20 (A.P.).—Two women today were claiming to be the wife of Pilot Lou Foote, sole survivor of the plane crash Sunday in which 14 were killed.

A telegram from Turlock, Calif., inquiring about the condition of Foote, who was severely injured in the crash identified the sender as the wife of the pilot.

The woman known here as Mrs. Foote said at her hotel that Foote had a divorced wife and 7-year-old daughter in Turlock, Calif., and that her own marriage to Foote took place in that State.

At the hospital Foote was said to have a chance for recovery.

Turlock, Calif., March 20 (A.P.).—Mrs. Lola Foote, Turlock aviatrix and divorced wife of Lou Foote, pilot of the plane which crashed Sunday with a loss of 14 lives at Newark, N. J., said she would take their 5-year-old daughter to the injured flier's bedside if he requests it.

"I would not go back alone, but if it were his wish to see his baby girl, the only decent thing for me to do would be to comply. I am not weeping for him," she said.

Mrs. Foote obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce here last summer, naming Mrs. Regina Rommel, as corespondent. She alleged that Foote and Mrs. Rommell, who also lived in Turlock, left here together for Arizona last July. The divorce decree has not been made final, she said.

W. L. Velie, 32, Auto Manufacturer, Dies

Moline, Ill., March 20 (A.P.).—Willard L. Velie, president of the Velie Motors Corporation, died today. He was 32 years old and became head of the corporation at the death of his father, October 24, 1928.

Until two days ago he was president of the Mono Aircraft Corporation, which he sold to a St. Louis syndicate. Physicians said heart disease was the cause of death. He had been ailing for several days.

INMAN DIVORCE SUIT TRIED; 2 MEN NAMED

Actor and "Dapper Dan" Collins Injected in Millionaire's Action Against Wife.

BOTH CHARGE CRUELTY

Reno, Nev., March 20 (A.P.).—The names of John Steele, described as a vaudeville performer, and a man known in New York as "Dapper Dan" Collins, today were injected into the divorce suit of Walker P. Inman, wealthy scion of an Atlanta family.

Inman, the son of Mrs. James B. Duke, widow of the tobacco magnate, charged his wife, Mrs. Helene Garnet Patterson Inman, with cruelty and mentioned Steele and Collins in his complaint. The couple were married in 1920. A jury of twelve men was completed this afternoon to hear the case.

Mrs. Inman, the daughter of a Kokomo, Ind., minister, made a counter charge of cruelty in her answer, alleging that her husband struck her on several occasions and refused to take her to places of amusement.

She asked that the divorce be denied and that a property settlement made in 1927, whereby she was to receive $150,000 in month; installments of $1,250, be set aside. She has received $35,000 of the amount.

Mrs. Inman arrived here yesterday and is stopping at the same hotel where her husband resides. Inman has taken up aviation since coming to Reno and flies his own plane.

U. S. and Belgium Sign Treaty of Arbitration

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Kellogg and the Belgian Ambassador, Prince Albert de Ligne, yesterday signed a treaty of arbitration and a treaty of conciliation between the United States and Belgium.

The treaties are similar to those negotiated and signed during the last year between the United States and several other countries.

RACHMANINOFF WINS TRIUMPH HERE ANEW

Pianist-Composer Charms a Capacity Audience in Brilliant Recital.

PLAYS HIS OWN WORKS

Rachmaninoff, poet of the piano and composer of world-famed preludes and other selections, held a capacity audience entranced for two hours at Poli's Theater yesterday afternoon as he played a comprehensive program with rare skill and virtuosity. The concert was given under the local management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

As usual the audience was most enthusiastic throughout the concert and recalled M. Rachmaninoff again and again, especially after the Mozart Sonata No. 14 and the Schumann "Carneval" with its 22 separate movements. The pianist received these plaudits with bows, but at the conclusion of the entire program played an encore, a simple but effective number of his own composition.

On the program also was another "Rachmaninoff" composition, his "Moment Musical," which is of great musical beauty, verily a sonnet on the piano, a compacted box of musical sweets.

Exquisite in fingering, the recitalist made each number played a gem of a different quality from the one immediately preceding it. His technical skill was evident but never overemphasized—a relief from the habit of some concert pianists.

The effects produced ranged throughout the possibilities of tonal beauty, and the singing tone brought out in some of the numbers was noteworthy. In the Mozart sonata all the dainty loveliness of that master's compositions was developed for the eager audience, and the second movement—the adagio—was wonderfully played.

The Sarciatti sonatas were well done also and the Chopin group showed how thoroughly this modern Slavic composer understands and interprets the works of his elder brother in music of the same race.

Rachmaninoff's own arrangement of Kreisler's "Liebesfreud" concluded the outstanding program in a manner that left the audience thorough satiafied and reluctant to leave the presence of this great master. E. E. P.

Undercover Work Here Lures Amateur Sleuth

The lure of the glory of being a detective in the National Capital has proved too much for one South Carolinian, who apparently has just completed a correspondence course on how to be a detective and can't wait for the world to learn of his fame and come seeking him.

"I have just finished my books," he told Daniel E. Garges, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, in a letter received yesterday, "and think I can keep myself under the cover per call or—respond to any emergency call."

The ambitious detective gave his address at R. F. D. 1, Liberty, S. C., and Garges wrote him telling about the laws governing appointments to the District Police Force, but was noncommittal about the prospects of appointment.

South's Patronage Pleas to Be Heard

Senate Committee Calls Witnesses From Tennessee and Louisiana.

(Associated Press.)

Extension of its inquiry into nearly every State in the South and the summoning of witnesses from Tennessee and Louisiana were indicated as virtually certain yesterday by Chairman Brookhart of the Senate patronage committee.

So many complaints have been received from Southern States about the distribution of Federal appointments by the Republican organizations there that Brookhart said he believed a "clean-up" of the whole situation was needed.

Some of the complaints have been received in letters, but a few have been laid before him personally by prominent Southern men who, he said, expressed a desire for improvement in the methods used in making appointments, particularly those of postmasters.

G. U. SCHOOL GIVEN MEDICAL PICTURES

Dr. John F. Moran Bequeaths Them to Institution Where He Was Instructor.

G. S. COOPER WILL FILED

Wills of Dr. John F. Moran, widely known physician and lecturer at the Georgetown University Medical School, who died March 17, and George S. Cooper, who died March 16, were filed for probate yesterday at the District Supreme Court.

Dr. Moran, who was the first physician in this country to utilize motion pictures in medical research work and lecturing, left to the Georgetown Medical School his collection of motion pictures dealing with valuable medical work. By a codicil of his will and with the declaration "money can not satisfy my obligation or words express my gratitude for their kindness and attention," he left $1,000 each to Drs. Edwin B. Behrend, Thomas F. Lowe, S. Logan Owens and Jerome F. Crowley. The first three physicians named were also given the library and surgical instruments of the deceased. By another codicil $1,000 each was left to Miss Mary Graham and Miss Mary Butler in acknowledgment for their services as nurses.

A sister, Mary A. Keleher; a brother, Michael V. Moran; a cousin, Margaret M. Cleary; a niece, Margaret M. Moran, and a nephew, Raymond L. Moran, were named beneficiaries of the residue of the estate, the amount of which was not disclosed.

The Cooper will directed payment of $10,000 and a diamond ring to Nellie M. Lindsey, his "best friend and business associate." His widow, Mrs. Margaret H. Cooper, was left premises at 1819 Wyoming avenue northwest and the residue of his estate. The will directed payments of $50 each month to two daughters, Margaret M. Smith and Helen W. Metcalfe, and at the death of the widow, the daughters and two other children, Fredericka B. Jeffords and George S. Cooper, jr., are to share the estate.

Russell and Pickard Now Radio Rivals

Broadcasting Companies Appoint as Vice Presidents Former Chieftains in Air Work of Agricultural Department.

The appointment of F. C. Russell, Assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, as vice president of the National Broadcasting Co. in charge of its affairs in Washington, is regarded as a direct answer to the Columbia Broadcasting System recently appointing as its vice president Sam Pickard, former radio commissioner and former director of radio at the Department of Agriculture. It appears to be a counterblow in the battle of the chains and shows how closely they are watching each other.

Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co. announced the names of five additional vice presidents. They are John W Elwood, present manager of the program department, New York; George Engles, present managing director of the National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau, New York; Niles Trammel, present manager of NBC Chicago offices; Don E. Gilman present manager of the NBC San Francisco offices; and A. L. Ashby, of New York, will be vice president and general attorney. The six new vice presidents will serve in addition to George F. McClelland, at present functioning as executive vice president and general manager.

However, with Mr. Russell and Mr. Pickard it is apt to be a case of friendly enemies, because the latter succeeded the former in developing the radio work at the Agriculture Department and both served as right-hand men to former Secretary Jardine, have had about the same experience, both are Middle Westerns—Russell hailing from Iowa and Pickard from Kansas, both were engaged in governmental work in Washington at the time of their selection, and they have been friends for years.

Mr. Russell's broadcastin, experience dates back a long while. He was in charge of the press service at the Agriculture Department when it started the first radio information work with weather and market reports. Mr. Russell began the first radio informational service for broadcasting stations. Mr Russell is also responsible for the program the Agricultural Department broadcasts through the NBC stations for fifteen minutes each noon.

When Secretary of Agriculture Jardine came in 1924 the department had been going on in a small way with these broadcasts. Then Mr. Jardine brought Sam Pickard here from Kansas to give his full time to the development of agricultural broadcasting and promoted Mr. Russell to be First Assistant to the Secretary. This position Mr. Russell has held ever since, being at present associated with Arthur M. Hyde, the new Secretary, in that capacity.

Although having held responsible positions at the Agricultural Department for the last seven years, Mr. Russell is now only 34 years old.

Mr. Russell yesterday said that he expected to leave at night for New York to confer with officials there regarding his new duties and to work out Washington plans which naturally would have to do with the development of national policies.

Likewise, he will have general charge of Station WRC, although it was indicated that Ralph Edmunds would continue as manager of the station.

The Army Band, directed by Capt. William J. Stannard, played in a recent broadcast through the NBC system, a Spanish serenade entitled "The Enchantress," written by George F. Ross. In his capacity as announcer at WRC, Mr. Ross frequently announces the Army Band concerts. Upon this particular occasion, however, he was handed a baton and accorded the privilege of conducting the band in his own composition.

Votes have all been cast and are now being counted in the balloting of radio listeners for favorite entertainers they desire to hear in the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Hour Tuesday night, April 2. The result of the contest will be announced during the R-K-O Hour next Tuesday night, at 11 o'clock.

With the Radio Commission granting to Station WCAU, Universal Broadcasting Co., in Philadelphia, a construction permit for 10,000 watts power it looks as if the Columbia network will have the most powerful station in that city.

The station at present is using 5,000 watts and operating on a frequency of 1,170 kilocycles. It is owned by Leon Levy, a brother-in-law of William Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting system.

What Today Means to You

March 21.

By MARY BLAKE.

"PISCES."

If March 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you today are from 7 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., from 11:45 a. m. to 1:15 a. m., from 3:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger period is from 10 a. m. to 11:30 a. m.

The signs denote that something will happen today which will tend to change your present line of action and bring success in its train. Today is an exceptionally auspicious occasion for the telling of the "old, old story."

Children born today will have natural aptitude, be resourceful and adaptable. They will in their youth be rather chicken-hearted, but, as their bodies grow, so will their spirits, and as adults they will develop will-power and staying qualities.

Your temperament is an artistic one and you are not very practical. The beautiful makes a strong appeal to you, and it is very difficult for you to contemplate with indifference anything that is sordid or ugly. You are adaptable and are always seeking an environment that is in consonance with your own esthetic ideas.

In this work-a-day world you will receive many jolts, but your home, where, in a spirit of true artistry, expression will be given to your impressions, will always serve as a shock-absorber.

Your nature is a kindhearted one, and you are frequently imposed on by those who impress you with their outward bearing. You, unfortunately, are not able to X-ray them—in a mental sense—and see what the externals cover. Your disposition is naturally affectionate, and the signs very clearly presage that, mated with a common-sense person, your private life will be a happy one.

If a woman, you will be an excellent mother, and be able to retain an unusual hold upon your children as they grow up; if a man, you have many friends and no enemies. Both men and women will have very high ideals and try to live up to them, although material reward may not come their way.

Successful people born March 21:

Joseph Vance, soldier, congressman and governor.
Henry S. Brown, jurist.
Henry R. Poore, artist.
Gen. Harbord, U. S. general.
Florenz Ziegfeld, theatrical manager.
William J. Macneven, physician.

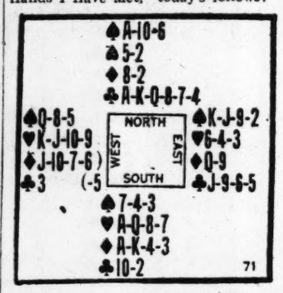
WORK ON BRIDGE

Continuing the series of "Misplayed Hands I Have Met," today's follows:



South opened the bidding with one Heart—a better bid than the stronger Diamond because it shows a Major suit and the combined hands may produce game at Hearts and not at Diamonds. West passed. North bid No Trump, which held the contract.

East started by leading the Deuce of Spades, and Declarer held up his Ace until the third round of that suit. He then tried to run his Clubs, expecting to make six Clubs, one Spade, two Diamonds and at least the Ace of Hearts; but East held the guarded Club Jack and Declarer was able to make only three Club tricks and score only one-odd because he had no entry in his own hand for his remaining Clubs.

Should he have made any more tricks?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

After winning the third trick with his Ace of Spades, twelve cards of that suit having been played, the Declarer knew that there was only one Spade left for the adversaries to make. They already had taken two Spade tricks, and he could afford to let them win the remaining Spade and one other trick.

In his two hands Declarer had a total of eight Clubs, leaving five for the adversaries, which probably were divided 3-2, but might be divided 4-1. So North should have led a small Club to trick 4. The worst that could happen would be that this trick would be won by East with the Jack and that he then would cash his thirteenth Spade. But that would give the adversaries only four tricks, and the Declarer would make the remainder and go game.

Of course, if the adverse Clubs were divided 3-2, the lead of the small Club on the first round would be throwing away a trick immaterial; and if they were divided 5-0, Declarer's case was hopeless from the beginning.

Hymn Sing Offered on Air Tonight

Midweek Federation Will Use Verses of Scripture. Beauty Diet Talk Given on WMAL at 10 A. M. Lenten Service 12:20.

The Mid-Week Federation Hymn Sing to be broadcast at 7 o'clock tonight will consist of old hymns having a theme which will be introduced with a verse of scripture. Practically all of the sacred lyrics are based upon a scriptural thought, and this evening the Hymn Sing will quote the verse from the Bible from which the theme has been taken, as a preliminary to the singing of the hymn.

The quartet presenting these hymns is composed of Rhoda Arnold, soprano; Frederick Vettell, tenor; Hazel Tuthill, contralto, and Arthur Billings Hunt, barytone and director. George Vause is piano accompanist.

Sammy Fain, whose "In a Little French Cafe," was sung in the "Chauve Souris" recently, and who also numbers among his song hits "There's Something About a Rose," "Wedding Bells Are Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine," and "When the World's at Rest" will be the featured composer in the Forhan Song Shop program from WRC at 8 o'clock.

A cycle of Eddie Dowling's songs will be featured on the radio program of the Hoover Sentinels from WRC, immediately following the Song Shop. Among them will be "Sleepy Valley," "Half a Moon Is Better Than No Moon," "Dreams For Sale," "In a Little White House," "Log Cabin of Dreams" and "In the Evening."

The vocal virtuosity of the Seiberling Singers will be demonstrated anew in their own quartet arrangement of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor" to be sung at 9 o'clock tonight. The Singing Violins offer on this date a unique arrangement of the Spanish lyric, "La Paloma." Ohman and Arden piano duo, will present a double syncopation of "Gypsy."

Walter Donaldson, modern American composer, wrote the impressionistic "Dance Barbare" to be heard during the Halsey-Stuart program at 10 o'clock. Other numbers are "Ay, Ay, Ay," Freire; "Sparkets," Miles; "Black Eyes," Horlick; "Josephita," Greer, and "Purple Road," Bram.

The National Concert Orchestra, under the baton of Maestro Cesare Sodero, will provide the orchestral features during the National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau Hour tonight. Assisted by Arcadie Birkenholz, radio virtuoso of the violin, and the Lennox String Quartet, Carolin Andrews, lyric soprano, known from coast to coast as "the lark" heads the list of vocalists, which includes the American Singers, a male quartet.

WRC will broadcast a noonday Lenten service at 12:20 o'clock. Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, will be the speaker.

An account of the speed boat regatta will be broadcast from Miami Beach at 4 o'clock this afternoon in place of the regular Army Band concert.

Pauline Lawn, operatic soprano, will be the artist in the Sonora program at 9:30 o'clock tonight from WMAL. Miss Lawn is a native of Newark, N. J., and received her musical education in Italy. Her offerings tonight will include "Vio lo Sapete," from "Cavalleria Rusticana," in which opera she created a sensation in Italy when she appeared under the direction of its composer, Mascagni. She will also sing Tosti's "Goodbye." The male trio will sing "I Loved You Then" and "Weary River" during the presentation.

The Columbians will play an entire request program of Jazz numbers at 10 o'clock from WMAL. All of the selections to be presented by the Columbians are especially arranged by Freddie Rich, their director.

During the meeting of the National Radio Homemakers Club, via WMAL at 10 o'clock this morning, Mrs. Ida Bailey Allen will talk on spring diets, and will explain the working of her beauty diet. Other morning features include "Musical Echoes From Broadway," and a half hour recital by the Topaz Trio.

Florence Jane Adams, impersonator, 'Amos 'n' Andy," and a dinner concert are the main features of WOL's offering during the early evening. Two hours of dance music will be broadcast, as usual, between 10 o'clock and midnight.

A classified civic program will be the first evening offering of Station WJSV at 6:30 o'clock this evening. Other features will be the Children's Half Hour, Kathryn Crowley, pianist, and the National Society of Children of the American Revolution program. The Columbia Trio is scheduled for 9:30 o'clock.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

AGE AND YOUTH.

Gay youth was there, and merriment
And laughter, free from care,
And a tired old heart sat far apart,
Eyeing them from his chair.
He spake no word the young folks heard
As he sat and watched them there.
They looked at him as youngsters will
Whose lives must still unfold,
But they only saw the toothless jaw
And the flesh that felt the cold,
And the wrinkled lines which are the signs
Distinguishing the old.
'Tis well that youth can laugh and play
And live its month of spring;
That it does not see in you and me
What time to them must bring;
For to think "some day I shall age that way"
Would be a frightful thing.
Yet that tired old man with the tresses gray
Knew well what time would do.
But he never spake: "You may some day shake
With paralysis agitans, too."
He wouldn't spoil youth with the dreadful truth
By telling them all he knew.

Jacqué INTERPRETS the MODE

An entirely modernistic robe de style in black moire, piped and bordered in blue with a bird design of pailletes from which depends a bow of blue ribbon. (Courtesy of Poiret, Paris).

New York, March 20, 1929.

NOTHING is calling forth more beauty and originality from the Parisian couturiers at the moment than the dinner gown. Its return to favor, and the revival of the charming custom of making of dinner something more than just the evening meal, has inspired them to creations which fairly leave one breathless.

Two very formal and elegant models shown by Premet may be taken as fair examples of the dinner mode.

* * * * *

The first is of red lace, over a matching foundation, and follows the general trend of the mode in its silhouette, being rather long at the back. To the skirt is given further grace by a volant of mousseline of exactly the same color, and this material is also used for a narrow scarf about the throat and for the border of the plain decolletage.

* * * * *

The other is of white satin faced in green. From the front it is extremely simple, being closely form-fitting except for fullness given to the bottom of the skirt by several godets. The front decolletage is square, while that at the back comes to a deep point. At this point is placed a bow of the same material, which is repeated further down.

New Dresses for Old!

How often in a collection does a perfectly plain dress reach almost indescribable heights of loveliness and chic by the artistry of its sleeves! All imagination seems to be truly concentrated on them nowadays.

So we have designed a lot of very unusual and lovely sleeves for you, and then tell you how to make them—in this week's illustrated leaflet for which you may send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post.

And, sh-h-h- you can put them into an old dress and have a brand new and really lovely one!

* * * * *

Sequin Necklaces.

Modernistic jewelry is often unexpected in form as well as lovely. An imaginative couturiere strung flat sequins together and observed that they made an attractive circlet for the neck. Voila, necklaces of flat sequins, appeared, and justified their creator's expectations!

And then we made the only illustration alive of this Poiret black moire robe de style! And we ask who else but he would have dared embroider two wee bluebirds in paillettes on the skirt, and permit them to hold a long, drooping, blue ribbon bow from their little beaks?

* * * * *

Wee Mamzelle.

In looking over Petite Adorable's last summer's wardrobe, we found that while almost all her dresses and coats were in very good shape, thanks to Annanina's care, there wasn't a one that still fitted her.

So we did some awfully clever making over that we thought you would like to know about—tiny skirts lengthened by inserting a band in the form of an incrustation, about 3 or 4 inches above the hem, never at the hem—and an incrustation of the same material on each sleeve—dresses that could not be lengthened, made into separate skirts that are buttoned onto white lingerie waists—and ever so many other things we have no more room to tell you about.

The Fashion Letter appears every Sunday in The Washington Post. Make it a point to read it!

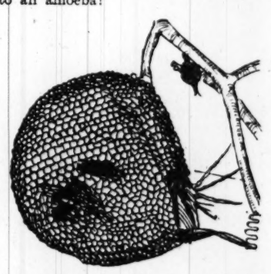
Wonders of the Microscope

II—Amoebas.

YESTERDAY I told you about the tiny animalcules which can be seen in a drop of pond water when you use a strong microscope. Some of them move very fast.

There are other creatures which may be seen in water taken from a pond. Among them is the "Amoeba," which moves very, very slowly. You have heard how slowly a snail moves? Well, it goes like a race horse compared to an amoeba!



An animalcule may be seen in shadow in a bladderwort trap. (From microscope photograph.)

An amoeba is about the size of a pinpoint. To move one inch—now hold our breath—this creature has to struggle along for more than fifteen hours! How would you like to be held to that pace?

It is interesting to watch an amoeba move under the microscope. To begin with, it looks like a tiny piece of jelly. This "jelly" can stretch out part of itself in any direction. Then it stretches out another part of itself. At last it gets to where it stretched itself to.

The amoeba may be said to be the simplest known animal. It has no mouth and no stomach. When there is a tiny speck of plant food around, the creature may roll over it. In some way the speck of food becomes part of the amoeba's body.

If you look at the amoeba long enough, you may see it divide into two parts. Each part will be alive, and will be able to move in the slow way and to eat food by covering it up.

There are plants in some ponds which eat the tiny "animalcules." I am thinking of the "bladderworts." They received their name from the "bladders" which they possess.

Each bladder is a tiny sack, and has a trap door. That door is made in such a way that it is easy to go in, but hard to get out. Animalcules often swim inside the bladders, but then it is goodbye for the visitors. They can not get out. Their bodies turn into juice which helps the plant to live. You may be able to watch such an event with the help of a strong microscope.

JELLEFF'S ◆ F STREET

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD.

My Dear Miss McDonald: I have just finished reading your column and here is my answer to Celia's question about life. Will you publish it? I hope so.

I am 25 years old. I was one of a family of six, four boys and two girls. As children we were given few of the luxuries of life. My father was a stern man, given to little affection for his family. Business seemed to be his whole world. We had very little fun. Mother was a quiet little thing given to raising her little brood.

In 1917 when war was declared my two eldest brothers enlisted. They were both killed and another brother died of the flu in the camp.

I was then the oldest in the family, having but one brother and my sister left. Then one day in 1920 my baby brother was brought home drowned. The strain was too much for my mother. Her four sons taken from her, and one night four months later she slipped quietly away from us. I felt stunned and so alone. For several years nothing further happened and I began to breathe freely and be normal again.

And then in 1925 my father and my oldest brother's widow and my only sister were killed in an auto accident. I was left alone. Alone? Well, not quite. Thank God I have something to help me forget. As she lay dying my sister-in-law asked me to take her son and only child. He was an orphan and knew I was the only one left. I have the child, so I promised willingly.

When my father's estate was settled a little over a year ago, I found I was a wealthy young woman, my nephew and I being the sole heirs.

Now, I suppose, Celia, you wonder that I have not mentioned romance yet. I think there is hardly a soul into whose life some romance has not found its way. I met and gave my heart to my one and only love when I was 19. We were to be married. We both worked and saved. Then my childhood girl friend came home from four years of college. They met. He forgot our girlhood days and our friendship. He forgot everything but that she wanted just another scalp for her belt. What followed was just what often follows. I do not think she ever really loved him but he became her devoted slave and companion. The next thing, a friend asked me if I had heard of their engagement. He felt pretty safe, I guess, as we had not publicly announced our engagement. Anyway, he did not come and explain or even say a word. They were married, and I know he is unhappy. Not so long ago we met and he told me he wishes there was some way out of it as he now sees the mistake he made. I suppose some think I am well rid of him. Well, perhaps.

Celia asks is life worth while and is it worth the living? Celia, dear, I really don't know what to think. I have often heard it said that we never really live until we have suffered. Then I have lived. For I have had nothing but suffering, shock, and grief.

Tonight as I sit here writing I forgive all, for a great contentment has come to me with Sonny. He fills the place my own son would have filled if I'd ever had one. I'll give him everything, education and love.

To try to forget in a measure, I sold the old home and bought a pretty little house in a small town. I know the town-folk think I have everything life offers. Yes, everything money can buy. But money can not buy happiness though it helps to smooth out the rough spots sometimes.

Cecelia wonders what she is here for. So do I. I don't know, but I know this. Sonny will be my all for the rest of my life.

So you see, Celia, dear, I have something to live for anyway. Couldn't you, too, adopt a child or be a mother to some group of motherless ones?

To Sonny I will be a mother, but think what Sonny has already been to me. Think of my desolation but for him! To the town-folk I am just the wealthy young girl with the adopted child who lives in the house on the hill. But in my heart I am grateful that tiny Sonny was left on earth to warm my heart.

Is life worth the struggle and the effort. I wonder! I think of our strict up-bringing, our solemn childhood, our short years together then death, partings. "SMILING THROUGH."

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS.

UNCOOKED RIPE BANANAS.

UNCOOKED bananas are excellent food when fully ripe. They are not easily digested and otherwise not wholesome when not fully ripe. A banana is not properly ripened until the yellow color has changed from a golden to a brownish tinge, with smaller, darker spots. Bananas that have any suggestion of a greenish tinge should not be eaten raw. They are wholesome after being properly cooked.

The fruit is cut from the tree or bush after it has attained full size, but while the peel is yet a vivid green. It is hauled to the boat, say 20 miles away, in an open car, similar to a stock car. It is immediately loaded in a boat built for the purpose. The hold is kept at a temperature around 58; the humidity is maintained properly, and the carbonic acid gas formed by the ripening fruit is displaced by fresh air. When the port of discharge is reached the fruit is loaded in special cars, heated in winter and cooled in summer, and rushed off to the market. The merchant stores them under conditions of temperature, humidity, ventilation and light and holds them until they are right. He frequently sells them when they are golden yellow and, therefore, unripe, but that is because the customer wants them that way, or thinks he does. The dealer knows better. When the consumer buys such bananas he should hold them until they begin to turn brown.

Reynolds, who has a book on caring for bananas, gives the following temperatures for holding bananas:

56 degrees—Proper for holding ripe bananas.

58 degrees—Proper for holding green bananas.

60 degrees—Proper for slow ripening.

62 to 66 degrees—Proper for normal ripening.

68 degrees—Proper for forced ripening.

72 degrees or over—Danger of "cooking."

He also gives the following schedule for ripening, marketing and using bananas:

2 days off boat: Peel green; separates from pulp with difficulty; pulp hard. Pulp makes up 60 per cent total weight. Pulp is composed of 20.25 per cent starch and 2.31 per cent sugar.

4 days off boat: Peel green beginning to turn yellow; pulp softening; pulp makes up 62.5 per cent total weight; pulp contains 11.85 per cent starch and 10.02 per cent sugar.

6 days off boat: Peel yellow with green tip (should not be eaten raw); pulp makes up 67.8 per cent of weight; pulp contains 6.83 per cent starch, 14.62 per cent sugar.

8 days off boat: Peel all yellow; edible, but flavor not best; pulp makes up 69.5 per cent of the weight; pulp contains 4.67 per cent starch and 16.65 per cent sugar.

10 days off boat: Peel all yellow, beginning to fleck; good flavor; pulp makes up 70.2 per cent weight; pulp contains 3.92 per cent starch and 17.21 per cent sugar.

12 days off boat: Peel flecked with brown; flavor and nutrition at best; pulp makes up 72.1 per cent of weight; pulp contains 0.72 per cent starch, 18.78 per cent sugar.

This table shows that when the peel is yellow flecked with brown the banana contains the largest amount of nourishment, it is sweetest, contains least raw starch and is best in flavor.

USE OF SPINAL TAPS.

J. W. writes: 1. What are spinal taps used for? Are they dangerous? 2. Why do they knock your knees to see if they jump forward?

REPLY.

1. The spinal fluid is withdrawn for purposes of diagnosis. The fluid is examined microscopically. It is used for Kahn and Wassermann tests. Sometimes it is examined bacteriologically. In a few diseases the spinal fluid is drawn as a part of treatment as distinguished from diagnosis.

2. Your reference is to testing what is known as the kneejerk. This is one of the reflexes; the one that is most generally tested. The reflexes are tested as a means of diagnosing locomotor ataxia and some other diseases.

The Children

By Edith Wharton

A sparkling serial story by one of America's foremost novelists at the gleaming heights of her power.

BOYNE gave a nervous laugh. "You did, most thoroughly."

"And—you won't tell me what you really meant?"

He stood motionless, his hands in his pockets, staring down at the knots in the wooden floor, as he had stared at them on the day when she had owned to having taken her father's money—but in a mental perturbation how much deeper! A few minutes before, it had seemed like profanation to brush her with the thought of his love; now, faced by her despair, by her sense of being left alone to fight her battles, he asked himself whether it might not be fairer, even kinder, to speak. At the thought his heart again began to beat excitedly. Perhaps he had been too impetuous, too inarticulate. What if after all, a word from him could wake the sleeping music?

The difficulty was to find a beginning. What would have been so simple if kisses could have told it, seemed tortuous or brutal when put in words. He shrank not so much from the possibility of hurting her as from the sudden fear of her hurting him beyond endurance.

"Judith," he began, "how old are you?"

"I shall be sixteen in three months—no, in five months, really," she said, with an obvious effort at truthfulness.

"As near as that! Well, sixteen is an age," he laughed.

She continued to fix her bewildered eyes on him, as if seeking a clew. "But I look a lot older, don't I?" she added hopefully.

"Older?. There are times when you look so old that you frighten me." He remembered then that she had spoken to him with perfect simplicity of Gerald Ormerod's desire to marry her, as of the most natural thing in the world; and his own scruples began to seem absurd. "I'm always forgetting what a liberal education she's had," he thought with a touch of self-derision.

He cleared his throat, and continued: "So grown up that I suppose you'll soon be thinking of getting married."

The word was out now; it went sounding on and on inside of his head while he awaited her answer. When she spoke it was with an air of indifference and disappointment.

"What's the use of saying that? How can I ever marry, with all the children to look after?" It was clear that she regarded the subject as irrelevant; her tone seemed to remind him that he and she had long since dealt with and disposed of it. "You might as well tell me that I ought to be educated," she grumbled.

He pressed on: "But it might turn out . . . you might find . . ." He had to pause to steady his voice. "If we can't prevent the children being taken away from you, you'll be awfully lonely. . . ."

"Taken away from me?" At the word her listlessness vanished. "Do you suppose I'll let them be taken like that? Without fighting to the very last minute? Let Syb Lullmer get hold of Chip—and Bun and Beechy go to that Buondelmonte man?"

"I know. It's hateful. But supposing the very worst happens—oughtn't you to face that now?" He cleared his throat again. "If things went wrong, and you were very lonely, and a fellow asked you to marry him——"

"Who asked me?"

He laughed again. "If I did."

For a moment she looked at him perplexedly; then her eyes cleared, and for the first time she joined in his laugh. Hers seemed to bubble up, fresh and limpid, from the very depths of her little girlhood. "Well, that would be funny!" she said.

There was a bottomless silence.

"Yes—wouldn't it?" Boyne grinned. He stared at her without speaking; then, like a blind man feeling his way, he picked up his hat and mackintosh, said: "Where's my umbrella? Oh, outside——" and walked out stiffly into the passage. On the doorstep, still aware of her nearness, he added a little dizzily: "No, please—I want a long tramp alone first. . . . I'll come in again this afternoon to settle what we'd better do about Paris. . . ."

He felt her little disconsolate figure standing alone behind him in the rain, and hurried away as if to put himself out of its reach forever.

CHAPTER XXX.

It was still raining when the Wheater colony left Cortina; it was raining when the train in which Boyne and Judith were traveling reached Paris. During the days intervening between the receipt of Mrs. Wheater's telegram and the clattering halt of the express in the Gare de Lyon, Boyne could not remember that the rain had ever stopped.

But he had not had time to do much remembering—not even of the havoc within himself. After the struggle necessary to convince Judith that she must go to Paris and take Chip with her—since disobedience to her mother's summons might put them irretrievably in the wrong—he had first had to help her decide what should be done with the other children. Once brought round to his view, she had immediately risen to the emergency, as she always did when practical matters were at stake. She and Boyne were agreed that it would be imprudent to leave the children at Cortina, where the Princess, or even Lady Wrench, might take advantage of their absence to effect a raid on the pension. It took a three days' hunt to find a villa in a remote suburb of Riva where they could be temporarily installed without much risk of being run down by an outraged parent. Boyne put the Rosengluh landlady off the scent by giving her the address of Mrs. Wheater's Paris banker, and letting it be understood that Judith was off to Paris to prepare for the children's arrival; and Bianca and Terry, still deep in Conan Doyle, gleefully contributed misleading details.

Kansas Once Arena Of Huge Animals

Rhinoceroses and Camels Roamed There 140,000 Years Ago.

Lawrence, Kans., March 20 (A.P.).—Bones of prehistoric rhinoceroses and camels which roamed western Kansas about 140,000 years ago have been unearthed by H. T. Martin, curator of paleontology at the University of Kansas.

Fossilized bones accidentally found by railway workmen led excavators to Sherman and Wallace Counties in western Kansas. In two quarries they found remains of saber-toothed tigers, prehistoric dogs larger than greyhounds and three-toed horses.

Mr. Martin claims that the Kansas rhinoceros must have been larger than the white rhinoceros of the Malay Peninsula. Jawbones of some of the beasts measure nearly 30 inches in width. Bones of two varieties of unidentified mastodon-like animals also were found.

When a Child is FEVERISH, CROSS, UPSET

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York. N. Y. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

WHAT DID MR. TAFT REALLY SAY?

New York, March 20.

Dear Editor—Like Miss Helen Terwilliger, I am a Radio Bad Breaks Scout, and I thought Justice Taft got mixed up in administering the oath to Mr. Hoover, as Miss Terwilliger said. Although it may have been the static, what I thought Mr. Taft said was:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute this office of President of the United States in sickness and in health, for better or worse, for richer or for poorer, and know ye by all these presents that I will to the best of my knowledge and recollection preserve, protect and defend the said premises, keeping them in good repair and giving 90 days' notice before quitting the same. Amen."

• • • •

Although I am no student of the Constitution, this seemed to me to be pretty well scrambled, and I could not make out whether he was marrying Mr. Hoover, leasing him an apartment of inducting him into office. I asked my girl friend, who lives upstairs, how it sounded over her radio and she said that she distinctly heard Justice Taft administer the oath like this:

"Do you, Herbert, take this office to love, honor and obey, in accordance with and pursuant to the aforesaid terms as herein stated, and solmenly swear that you will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you? My commission expires March 26, 1928."

This girl admitted that she was trying to listen to two stations at the same time and that the other one was broadcasting a comic opera, so I asked a cousin of mine, who has a radio set with two of the six tubes blown out, what she heard when Mr. Hoover was being sworn in as President, and she said that over her radio it was:

"All men are born free and equal and as such are entitled to life, liberty, and you can fool some people all the time and all people some of the time, but right or wrong, my country."

She says she took this down verbatim just before her outside aerial blew away and that, while there was some interference from a trombone solo, she heard whoever was being made President reply in a loud voice, "The same to you and many of them."

Can we all be wrong?

Truly yours, IMA DODO.

TIGHTENING MONEY UNSETTLES STOCKS

Some Industrials Move Ahead in Buying by Pools; Oils Active.

OTHER GROUPS ARE HEAVY

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—Extreme sensitiveness of the call money market thoroughly unsettled the stock market today, although industrial news in the main continued highly favorable and pools were able to make substantial headway in some parts of the list, particularly the oils.

Call money renewed at 9 per cent and rose to 10, although calling of loans was nominal. Such scarcity of money, with slight withdrawals, caused considerable apprehension as to what would happen should banks or corporations find occasion to withdraw large sums.

It is feared that heavy calling of loans might result from higher Federal Reserve rediscount rates, and while no increase is looked for in the New York rate tomorrow, reports emanating from Chicago banking circles had it that such a raise may be made in the Chicago rate on Friday. If higher rates are to come, Wall street would not be surprised to see them initiated at Chicago, as the Chicago Reserve Bank's reserve ratio had fallen to about 62 per cent, while the New York banks ratio was above 80 last week.

Copper Mart Again Unsettled.

The copper market was again unsettled by the attempt of one seller to put the price up another cent to 23 cents a pound. Large producers, who followed the last rise of 1 cent, to 22 cents, only after a lay of indecision, refused to follow this move, however, as reports were circulated that consumers here and abroad are considering the use of copper sustitutes where possible.

Other nonferrous metals continued to advance, lead jumping a quarter of a cent a pound for the second successive day, to 7¾ cents a pound, and zinc moving up $5 a ton.

An important feature of the day's news was the final Government 1928 cotton crop report, which was lower than expected, and resulted in advances of $1.50 to $2 a bale in cotton futures, which, however, brought out heavy profit taking.

The steel trade reviews were again highly optimistic, reporting operations at peak levels in several centers, and orders sufficient to keep mills busy through April. A less favorable development was a sharp reduction in freight car loadings for the week ending March 9.

Old Radio Fails to Appear.

A curious development of the day's trading was that the old Radio stock, in which trading will be permanently discontinued Friday, failed to appear on the tape, probably for the first time since it was listed. The nearest it came to a sale was 480 asked and 425 bid, as compared to yesterday's close of 485. Most of the issue has probably already been converted into the new stock, which sold down about 4 points to 92½, but closed at 94.

In the oils, which were stimulated by reports that the curtailment measure in the California legislature is expected to pass within 60 days, and expectations of progress in curtailment plans for both domestic and foreign fields, Standard of California mounted about 5 points to a new peak and Standard of New Jersey and Shell Union nearly duplicated their previous highs for the year.

Barnsdall A improved in expectation of declaration of an extra dividend at the April meeting. Indian refining and Houston were run up 6 and 9 points.

Anaconda and Chile at New Peaks.

In the coppers, unsettled by confusion in the red metal market, Anaconda sold up nearly 6 and Chile 5 points to new peaks, while Greene Cananea sold down about 4 points at one time, and Kennecott 3. National Lead rose 6 points to a new peak, but St. Joseph encountered profit-taking. Advance Rumely Common was again heavily bought, soaring 11 points, and selling above the preferred. Otis Elevator and American Express rose 9 and 10 points. International Telephone rose 11 points to a new peak. American Can was bid up 4 points to a new high at 127, and the move was attributed to a powerful pool.

Steels, motors and rails were inclined to heaviness. U. S. Steel sold off about 2½ points, but rallied somewhat. American Radiator, Crosley Radio Common, General Electric, Goodyear, Lambert, Montgomery Ward, National Surety, Victor and Woolworth were among issues losing from 2 to 5 points. Macy dropped 2 points to a new low at 159.

Commodity markets were irregular. Crude Rubber futures dropped about 1½ cents a pound in a break precipitated by lower prices in London. Grains moved in a narrow range.

Foreign exchanges were easier, with sterling sagging a fraction. The Spanish peseta rallied nearly 1-3 of a cent.

CRITICS LEAN TOWARD MACKS TO BEAT OUT YANKEES

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS

NEW YORK, March 20—Announcement that athletic operations of Washington and Jefferson have been analyzed by Carnegie Foundation sport chemists and found to be free of artificial coloring, benzoate of soda, wood alcohol or whatever other deleterious substances they were looking for reveals that the foundation has been carefully investigating the practices of hundreds of colleges.

If their investigations really are thorough and the reports of them full and frank, the Carnegie authorities should be able to shed considerable light on the real part sport plays in the educational system. It won't require the employment of any bloodhounds to detect odoriferous practices at some institutions. It ought to do good to reveal them, if only to tip off other colleges to devices more ingenious than their own for capitalizing athletics.

Sports for Sports' Sake and Heart and Will Personified.

Likeliest of a string of pitchers now working out for the Brooklyn Prep Nine is John V. Dollard. When he walks out to the box to start his first game as a first string pitcher, he will reach a goal that has led him through tortuous paths. Six years ago he fell under a railroad train and lost both legs half way to the knee. Two years later, walking a bit uncertainly on artificial legs, he came out for the baseball team. Inability to field a bunt quickly cost him a no-hit game in one contest that he pitched for the second team. Since then he has practiced fielding and base running, so that now he is able to do both acceptably. He has a great arm, a great eye and, as it is really unnecessary to add, a great heart.

"Play Ball' Is Signal for Cubs' Versatile Pitcher to Quit.

Henry Grampp, it is revealed, has pitched daily for the Chicago Cubs for three years, yet he is not on the official roster of the club nor has his name ever appeared in a boxscore. Mr. Grampp's baseball toil is toil indeed, unrelieved by the zest of combat and the acclaim of fans. He is only a batting practice pitcher.

If the Cubs are to face Carl Mays, for instance, Mr. Grampp goes out there and throws up a few underhand balls to the Cub sluggers. If Alexander is expected to be the opposing pitcher, we are told, he gives an imitation of Alexander's style. If the imitation is at all effective, one would think that the Cubs could use his occasionally after the umpire calls, "play ball!" which is now Mr. Grampp's cue to call it a day and hie himself to the showers. Next to managing the Phillies, Mr. Grampp's seems the most unattractive job baseball has offered since an unsung hero filled a line on the Giants' pay roll as keeper of the late "Bugs" Raymond.

Credit Where Credit Is Due, Theory of "Bugs" Raymond.

Raymond's keeper was one of a triumvirate, composed of the sleuth, John J. McGraw and Mrs. Raymond. The job of handling "Bugs" was too big an order for all three of them combined. McGraw thought he was taking a big step toward the solution of the problem when he arranged to have all the pitcher's salary paid over to his wife. After a day or two of enforced sobriety Raymond, McGraw thought, was in condition to pitch.

"You go in there and pitch, Bugs," he told his hired man. Bugs pointed to the spot in the grandstand where his wife was sitting.

"Let her pitch, why don't you?" he roared. "You gave her all my booze money!"

Grand National Course Is Test of Horse's Heart.

No prize that racing has to offer is more eagerly sought than the winning of the Grand National, England's steeplechasing classic, which will be run near Liverpool Friday. If ever a course was devised to test a horse's heart, it is the one over which 40 horses are scheduled to run. "Scheduled" is right, for

Marines Bow In S. Atlantic Tourney

Woltz Five Win, 34-13; Celtics-Kennedys in Tonight's Feature.

Noel 100-Pound Team Victor in Overtime; Stewarts Score.

WHILE followers of the South Atlantic A. A. U. championship basket ball tournament, which The Washington Post is staging at the George Washington University Gymnasium, are picking the United Typewriter Grays and the Jewish Community Center to meet in the finals for the District unlimited title, the Woltz Photographers served notice on the remaining field that they must be reckoned with by outclassing the Quantico Marines by a 34-13 score.

Two other contenders meet tonight when the famed St. Mary's Celtics, of Alexandria, face the Kennedy Red Stars in the unlimited feature of another six-game program, which also includes a girls game between the Columbia A. C. and the Hyattsville High team. The Kennedys are the "dark horses" of the tournament, according to their rooters, who are backing them to take the Celtics in camp tonight.

Last night's games proved interesting and produced the first extra period contest of the tournament. The Noel House 130-pounders won the overtime game from the St. Thomas Five, after a terrific battle.

The 145-pound class games were thrillers. The Stewart Bros. Five stopped the Calvary Reds, 30 to 22. The Reds had only five players available and put up a brilliant battle. Ray Davidson, their star, is out-of-town with the Emerson Prep Five. St. Peter's took a hard-fought contest from the Crescents, 31 to 26 in the other game.

The Jewish Community Center 130-pounders won their thirty-first straight game and advanced to the semifinals by defeating the Boy's Club Standards, 19 to 14.

Woltz Five Impressive in 34-13 Win Over Marines.

Woltz Photographers displayed their potential strength last night, in the only unlimited clash carded, by completely overwhelming the Quantico Marines Quintet, 34 to 13.

The Devil Dogs were unable to find the hoop, getting but one basket during the first half, trailing, 17 to 3, as the second half got under way. Most of their shots rimmed the basket while the victors were piling up points. They found their true stride for a brief period in the third quarter, outscoring their rivals, but the rally was short lived.

Stewart and Heiss were the aggressors for the Woltz Team. Paul Brown, of scholastic fame, was brilliant on the defense. Huck and Ostrander led the Marine attack.

Harris' Last-Minute Goals Win for Stewart Quintet.

"Sonny" Harris arose to the occasion last night and enabled the Stewart Bros. Quintet to survive in the 145-pound title quest when he contributed three baskets in uncanny rapidity in the final quarter to enable his team to triumph over the determined Calvary Reds Five, 30 to 22.

Cubs Maul Tiger Hurlers in 13-3 Victory; Browns, Indians, Phillies and Macks Win

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 20 (A.P.).—The Chicago Cubs clawed up the Detroit Tigers to the tune of 13 to 3 here today in the opening game of a series of five exhibition contests between the two major league outfits. The National Leaguers, favored to win the pennant in their circuit, slashed two Tiger hurlers for seventeen hits.

The Cubs fell upon Sorrell at the start of the game and before the smoke had cleared had piled up a nine-run lead in the first three frames. The Tigers got to Malone for three runs in the fifth, but that was the only inning in which the American Leaguers could bunch hits.

Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler, outfielder, poled a home run in the first inning that gave the Cubs their first tally. The circuit clout was the longest ever seen here.

Giants Get Morning Workout, But Rain Halts Game.

San Antonio, Tex., March 20 (U.P.).—A downpour of rain cut short the scheduled practice game of the New York Giants with St. Mary's College this afternoon in the second inning. At that time the Giants were leading, 7 to 1. McGraw held the usual morning workout and spent an hour instructing the team in cut-off plays on throws from the outfield.

Old Alex Not as Seriously Hurt as First Thought.

Avon Park, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—The injury Grover Alexander sustained when struck on the elbow by a batted ball Tuesday is not as severe as was first feared, Manager Southworth, of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced today. The veteran hurler worked for ten minutes in the regular practice today, and his arm, although sore, is improving. Haid and Bell will pitch three innings each against the Phillies Thursday, Southworth said, with either Chapman or Brown as the other choice.

Phillies Down Robins for First Time, 6 to 5.

Clearwater, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—The Brooklyn Dodgers lost their first encounter with another major league team today, bowing to the Philadelphia Phillies in an exhibition game, 6 to 5. The Phillies trailed until the eighth inning, when five runs gave them a commanding lead. A three-run rally in the last of the same inning fell one short of tying the score for the Dodgers.

Braves Send Plansky To Providence Team

Special to The Washington Post.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 20.—Anthony (Tony) Plansky, former all-around star athlete at Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., today was released along with three other recruits by the Boston Braves to Providence, of the Eastern League. Plansky had been here from the start of the training season.

Signed by Judge Emil Fuchs, president-manager, two months ago on the recommendation of his former coach, John D. O'Reilly, Plansky was considered a good prospect as a pitcher and outfielder. He is chiefly in need of seasoning as since he left Georgetown in 1926 he has played very little baseball.

While at Georgetown, Plansky did not indulge in the diamond game except on a few occasions when he pitched, but then he showed flashes of promise both as a flinger and as a hitter. He confined his athletic activities at the Hilltop mostly to track and football.

Big League Holdouts Now Reduced to Six

New York, March 20 (United Press). Only six major league players are unsigned, a check-up by the United Press revealed today.

Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder, is the most prominent of the holdouts. He is demanding a salary of $18,000 from the Pirates.

Other unsigned players are Frank McGowan, St. Louis Browns outfielder; Bill Clarkson, Boston Braves pitcher; Ernie Orsatti, St. Louis Cardinals outfielder; Val Picinich and Hugh McMullen, Cincinnati Reds catchers.

Derby to Be Radioed At Four Points on Course

New York, March 20 (U.P.).—The Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs May 18 will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network, the National Broadcasting Co. announced tonight.

Microphones will be stationed in four specially constructed booths at various points around the infield and the announcer at each will describe the progress of the race as the field comes within his range of vision. This, according to the N. B. C., is the most elaborate set-up ever undertaken for the broadcasting of a horse race.

Pladner Unable to Make Flyweight Limit, Claim

(Associated Press.)

It may develop the New York State Athletic Commission was a trifle hasty in extending recognition to "Spider" Pladner, the sensational little Frenchman, as flyweight champion of the world. Not that the "Spider" has failed to earn this recognition in beating Schwartz, Hill and Genaro, but it is doubtful whether he can any longer make the 112-pound class limit.

The word from Paris, in fact, is that neither boxer actually made this limit for the fight in which Pladner scored a 47-second knockout over Frankie Genaro, of New York. The official weighing-in was secret, by mutual agreement. Pladner, say the French critics, will fight henceforth as a bantam. Regardless of his weight, however, he retains a wallop.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 20 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Browns suffered their first defeat of the spring training season here this afternoon when they were nosed out by the Columbus Team of the American Association, 3 to 2. President Phil Ball, of the Browns, witnessed the game.

A double by Neis, Columbus center fielder, followed by two sacrifices, gave Columbus the winning run in the sixth. Schulte, outfielder, was the star performer for the Browns, collecting three of his team's six hits.

Rain Halts Game Between White Sox and Steers.

Dallas, Tex., March 20 (U.P.).—The Chicago White Sox and the Dallas Steers were tied at 3-all when the rain stopped their exhibition game here today at the end of the first half of the fourth inning. Adkins and Berg worked for the Sox. The rain also spoiled the afternoon for a large number of women, who were attracted by the first free gate of the training camp season.

Lind and Averill Figure Strong in Indian Win.

New Orleans, La., March 20 (A.P.).—Carl Linds scratch hit with two men down in the ninth inning brought in the run that gave the Cleveland Indians a 4-to-3 victory over the New Orleans Pelicans today. It was the third straight defeat of the Pels.

Earl Averill, however, played the stellar role consistently, driving in two runs on a double and a single and playing sensationally in center field.

Red Sox Idle; Carrigan Holds Skull Practice.

Bradenton, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—The Boston Red Sox had their first enforced rest of the season today when rain prevented the regular workout. Skull practice was conducted by Manager Carrigan, with emphasis laid on the mental attitude of the rookies.

Athletics Come from Behind to Trounce Reds.

Orlando, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—Overcoming a three-run lead established by the Reds in the first inning, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated Cincinnati in an exhibition game today, 7 to 5. The Athletics used Breckenridge and Walberg on the mound and the pair were touched for an even dozen hits. The winners made thirteen hits.

Nats' Hurlers Face Longer Shifts

Only Weaver, Brown to Oppose Robins in Battle Today.

Nats to Quit Tampa if City Council Enforces Contract.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

TAMPA, March 21.—Because of a heavy diamond, the result of last night's rain, the Washington pitchers were unable to do their usual hurling to the batters this morning, and all reported so well rested tonight, especially with respect to their salary wings, that Manager Johnson has decided that from now on they will be asked to take longer shifts in games.

This decision becomes effective tomorrow, when the Nationals battle the Brooklyn Robins at Clear Water, with Big Jim Weaver and Lloyd Brown slated to work four and five innings, respectively, unless it becomes necessary to remove one or both.

In the past, it has been the custom not to ask the flingers to go more than five innings before the regular season starts, and Johnson himself declares that he had no trouble practically doubling the assignment when called upon to go the route after the schedule opened. Some of the pitchers, however, have asked that the longer shifts start early, and that before the series with the Giants ends they be left on the hill for six or seven rounds, and the chances are that Johnson will accommodate them.

Only 3 Open Dates for Nats Until Regular Season Opens.

For the time being, however, it is his plan to let one hurler work four frames and the other five. Not only will this help develop the flingers' arms, but it also will make Johnson's job easier, as, with only seven pitchers at camp, a busy "grape fruit" league season with batting practice also having to be provided for, found him somewhat puzzled. Even with two hurlers a game there will be plenty of work. From next Saturday on there will be games every day except three until the American League season opens.

President Clark Griffith this morning conferred with the Tampa officials regarding continuing training here each spring, but no decision for the simple reason that one technical obstacle had to be overcome before the Nats' owner was willing to talk business at all. In his previous contract which, it seems, expired after the 1928 training season, there is a provision that the Nationals must pay the city a per centage of the earnings of all exhibition games played here. Griffith was told, he said, that this clause could be ignored.

The present mayor, who was not in office when the original contract was drawn up, knows nothing of this waiver and although favorable to granting it, feels that the city council should pass on the question. Consequently, things are at a standstill until the council takes action.

Nats to Quit Tampa if City Enforces Contract.

Should this body fail to uphold Griffith's contention and demand the "take" from the time the contract was in force, the chances are that the Nationals will decide to seek another training camp next season. On the other hand, should the decision favor the Nats, then the Washington Club owner will continue negotiations which involve, among other things, some unusual expenses assessed the Nats this spring and the waiving of its territorial rights by the Tampa Southeastern League Club.

And, as the owners of the Smokers have intimated that they intend to hold their ground in the controversy, unless a compromise of some kind is effected, indications are that the Nats will bid permanent adieu to Tampa.

Catcher Spencer Reports, Ready for Duty.

Catcher Roy Spencer, of Indianapolis, recently declared a free agent by Judge Landis and signed by the Washington Club, reported here at noon today. He has been training regularly with the Indians and reports that he is ready to go to work right now.

"Red" Sweeney, right-handed pitcher, who performed here last year and was given his unconditional release, worked out with the Nationals this morning. He is a tall, rangy fellow. He was with the Cincinnati Reds last spring, but

PARLEY OF MAGNATES AT TAMPA IS SEEN AS MOVE AGAINST LANDIS

Special to The Washington Post.

TAMPA, Fla., March 20.—Storm clouds that bode no good for Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis are gathering in Tampa, or it may be just a coincidence that Magnates Clark Griffith, of the Nats; Col. Jacob Ruppert, of the Yankees, and Phill Ball and L. P. McEvoy, of the Browns, are here tonight with their heads very close together.

The Nats, the Yankees and the Browns are the three American League clubs who were forced to turn loose ball players as free agents as a result of Landis' ruling on "undercover" deals last week. The magnates would not say that the gathering at Griffith's winter heath was other than a friendly visit, but at least one raised eyebrow greeted this explanation.

The better guess is that some plan for counter action caused Ruppert to come on from St. Petersburg and Ball and McEvoy to cross the State from West Palm Beach. The Nats lost Pitcher Guy Cantrell and Outfielder Melburn Simons by Landis' ruling and the Yanks are forced to free Pitcher Ed Wells. The Browns incurred the loss of Pitcher Ernie Wingard, and none of the magnates have commended Landis for his action, while at least one, Griffith, waxed hotly indignant.

BRITISH BOAT LEADS WITH WOOD OUT

Segrave Wins Opening Heat After Mishap to Miss America.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 20 (A.P.).—Luck broke against Gar Wood, ace of American speed boat pilots, and his Miss America VII today, and Maj. H. O. D. Segrave, British driver, in his Miss England loafed to an easy victory in the first heat of their match with an average speed for the 12 miles of 59.238 miles per hour.

Wood, driving the record holding craft, roared out into a lead early in the race.

A broken steering quadrant forced the Miss America, which holds the world's record for speed boats of 92.838 miles per hour, out of the race on the back stretch of the two-mile course on the third lap. When the accident forced him out, Wood had a half a lap lead over the invader, who seeks to dethrone him as king of speed-boat pilots.

Craft in Shape to Resume Today, Wood Declares.

Seeing his opponent disabled, and out of the race, the Englishman throttled down his motors and finished out the race in 12 minutes 9.38 seconds. Wood announced tonight his craft would be in shape by the time the starter's gun barks tomorrow.

The race was the climax of the first day's program of the sixteenth annual Miami Beach Yacht Club Regatta, and thousands lined the shores of Biscayne Bay and the docks, or sat in anchored craft along the two-mile course.

Miss America, in a swirl of spray, leaped away from Miss England to take a short lead within 100 yards of the starting line.

As Miss America rounded the first turn, fire belched from her vertical exhaust pipes above the cloud of spray that followed her. Miss England swerved to the outside to miss the backwash of Wood's boat, and was lagging ten lengths behind as the American defender sped along the back stretch of the course.

Miss England 8 Lengths Behind Until Mishap.

Miss England picked up speed as she rounded the turn to cross the line for the first time, and held to the ten lengths distance as they rounded the turn into the back stretch of the second lap. Here the English challenger picked up a little and had taken up a quarter of her disadvantage when she crossed the line at the end of the second lap.

It was at the next turn several hundred yards from the judges' stand that the steering quadrant on Wood's defending craft broke, disabling him for the rest of the race. Wood's speed for his two laps was clocked to average 64.952 miles an hour, which was in excess of any lap time registered by the English pilot.

Segrave's average speed was 59.228.

STEWARTS SEEK GAME.

Athletics Find Favor With Experts

Picked to Win by 4 of 5 Voting; Superior Pitching Seen.

Reorganized Infield and Pitching Are New York "Ifs."

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, March 20 (A.P.).—It may not be altogether significant when the experts and the "wise money" disagree, but it is at least worth looking into.

The New York Yankees are coupled with the Chicago Cubs in Wall street as cofavorites to win the major league flags, but, on the face of early returns, there is a distinct tendency among the newspaper critics to swing over to the Athletics in the forthcoming American League chase.

This drift may not last, nor may it be considered just yet as entirely representative, but it is too pronounced now to be overlooked. It may be almost startling to supporters of the Yankees to discover that an average of four out of five experts so far casting their ballots have selected the Athletics in preference to the world's champions.

Disappointment of Macks of Past 2 Years Recalled.

Predictions that bloom in the spring sometimes wither by autumn. The Athletics, after calling Cobb and Speaker to colors, were hot favorites in 1927 only to be subdued by the bats of Ruth, Gehrig and company. Connie Mack's energetic young men had another big chance last year, but blew it away when it came to a hand-to-hand grapple with the champions at the Yankee Stadium in September.

As long as the natural Yankee power is on the field, apt to bust loose at any moment, the champions will, as the saying goes, "take a lot of beating." Nevertheless, the critics consider that a number of "ifs," concerned chiefly with the outcome of the Yankee infield reorganization and the recovery of such pitching talent as Pennock and Moore, are attached to the champions' prospects. Mack's superior pitching strength, the experts reason, may turn the scales in his favor.

Wall Street Odds See Race Between Two Clubs.

There has not been any substantial shift in Wall street views of the baseball races, but the latest quoted odds make it clear that two-club race on the American League and four-club scramble in the National is anticipated by the "wise money."

The Athletics are indicated as the chief threat of the Yankees, while the Giants, Pirates and Cardinals are bracketed as equal threats to the favored Cubs. Here's how the clubs are quoted:

NAT. LEAGUE.		AM. LEAGUE.
Cubs	11 to 10	Yankees	1 to 1
Giants	2½ to 1	Athletics	5 to 4
Pirates	2½ to 1	Browns	8 to 1
Cardinals	2½ to 1	Tigers	8 to 1

LOUGHRAN BLOCKING WALKER'S PATH TO THIRD TITLE

Bid for Glory Scheduled Mar. 28

Fitzsimmons Is Only Man to Earn 3 Ring Championships.

Bout Looms as "Good Little Man Against Good Big Man."

By BERT DEMBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

CHICAGO, March 19 (U.P.).—Already having held two titles, Mickey Walker next week will go after the honor which has defied boxers since the days of old Bob Fitzsimmons—the possession of a third ring championship.

Mickey hopes to add the light-heavyweight title to his trophies by whipping Champion Tommy Loughran here March 28. He already has held the welterweight championship and is the present middleweight champion.

To take a place alongside Fitzsimmons as a three-title man, Walker must surmount a difficult obstacle when he meets Loughran. Tommy doubtless is the best man in his class and since Walker appears to be the best of the middleweights the bout seems to be the old story of a good little man against a good big man. Walker probably will scale around 164 pounds, while Loughran will be within a pound of the 175-pound light-heavyweight limit.

Mickey Hopes to Overcome Disadvantage With Speed.

Mickey hopes to overcome this disadvantage with speed, but Loughran himself is anything but slow. Walker several times has demonstrated he is a one-punch knockout man, notably in his bout with Mike McTigue. Mickey hit Mike just one punch on the jaw as the fight opened, and the Irishman was out for several minutes.

Walker reached the middleweight heights after a stormy career. He beat Jack Britton for the welterweight title back in 1922 and for four years was the class of the welters. Then he lost to Pete Latzo in Scranton, Pa., despite his being a favorite.

There were some hints which attributed Mickey's defeat to California "night life" but be that as it may Walker came back a few months later as a middleweight and immediately became a title contender. He climaxed his middleweight efforts by beating Tiger Flowers for the championship.

Although there are some who still contend that Flowers woh by a mile Mickey proved in the fight that he can take it and the ability to take it may be a prime asset in the Loughran fight.

Kearns in Walker's Corner, Will be Distinct Advantage.

Another advantage Mickey will have is the sagacity of Jack Karns, one of the shrewdest managers in the country and as good a "corner man" as there is in the game.

It has been Kearns' dream to develop Mickey into a heavyweight champion, but the latter so far, has not put on enough weight for that. However, Loughran has been clamoring for heavyweight bouts and if Mickey whips him it would not be surprising to see Kearns yet try to put enough weight on Walker to go after the heavyweights.

Loughran thinks he can whip any of the heavyweight contenders and it doubtless is true that he can whip many of them. Like Chuck Wiggins he is not claiming the heavyweight title but would like to meet some of the contenders. Chuck's words along these lines aptly describe Tommy's attitude. Says Chuck:

"That guy Tunney left a lotta guys thinkin' they oughta be champion. I ain't claimin' any championship for myself but I bet I can knock the slats out of a lot of guys that are."

Mickey, if Winner, Could Lose Two Titles in One Bout.

If Mickey whips Loughran he will find himself in a queer predicament when he attempts to defend his middleweight title again. Fighting a middleweight contender in a championship fight, Walker would be defending both titles and would lose both if a middleweight defeated him.

He is in a position with the National Boxing Association right now which makes it compulsory that he must defend his middleweight crown by September. The association would not sanction the Walker-Loughran fight until Mickey guaranteed by a $10,000 forfeit that he would defend his middleweight title by September.

That means, if Walker wins, that Ace Budkins, Mickey's probable middleweight opponent this summer, will get a crack at two titles instead of one.

CAPITAL PLAYERS MEET.

All Capital A. C. baseball players are asked to report tonight at a meeting at 270 Fifteenth street southeast, at 8:30 o'clock. New candidates are also urged to attend.

G. U. BOXERS NAMED FOR TOURNEY

Clementi, 160-Pounds, in Debut Tomorrow at Penn State.

THE Georgetown University Boxing Team, at full strength for the first time this year, tonight will depart for State College, Pa., where tomorrow night it will engage in first-round bouts of the annual intercollegiate championships which will be held under the auspices of Penn State College. Georgetown boxers will meet in the first round the representatives of five of the seven other teams entered in the tournament.

The line-up of the Hiltoppers who hope to wrest the team championship from Navy, was announced last night by Coach Jim McNamara and is as follows: Joe Davis, bantamweight, Emmett Hagerty, featherweight; Joe Madden, lightweight; Charley Fish, welterweight; Gerry Clementi, middleweight; Jack Tierney, light-heavyweight, and Fred Schaffley, heavyweight.

Clementi, the 160-pounder, will be making his debut in an intercollegiate bout for the Blue and Gray. McNamara picked him from the winners of the recent Georgetown intramural bouts as a bright prospect for varsity competition and feels that he will acquit himself creditably.

G. U. Escapes Navy and Penn In First-Round Drawings.

The drawings for the first round will bring Georgetown together with New York University in the 115-pound class; Penn State, 125; Western Maryland, 135; Western Maryland, 145; Syracuse, 160; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 175, and Western Maryland, unlimited. Neither Navy nor Pennsylvania University will clash with the Blue and Gray in first-round bouts.

Georgetown's hopes rest mainly on Hagerty, Fish and Schaffley, the most experienced members of the team.

Linconshire Handicap Won by Elton at 100 to 1

Lincoln, England, March 20 (A.P.).—Elton by Essexford out of Twincat and owned by Mrs. R. W. Foster, won the famous Lincolnshire Handicap over the mile course today.

W. Barnett's Athford was second and Lord Beaverbrook's Miscow was third. Thirty-five ran.

Elton won by a short head. There were one and one-half lengths between second and third.

The betting was 100 to 1, 33 to 1 and 100 to 8.

MATMEN FIT FOR BOUT.

"Demon" Gardini and "Bull" Martin have been pronounced as fit for their wrestling scramble tonight at the Strand Theater. These bitter rivals will start their fireworks as soon as the regular theater performance closes.

HISER TAKES ALL-EVENTS LEAD IN PIN TOURNAMENT

Bethesda Star Sets Pace at Richmond

Coliseum Pinmen Roll 1,636 Set; Newport Man Rolls 406.

Special to The Washington Post.

RICHMOND, Va., March 20.—John Henry Hiser, manager of the Bethesda, Md., alleys, stepped into prominence here tonight in the National Duck Pin Bowling Congress tournament by taking the lead in the battle for the all-events championship, as well as third place in the singles. His team spilled 1,691 pins to gain second place among the leading men's teams.

Hiser collected 388 in his singles set, 337 in doubles and 348 in team competition for an all-events total of 1,073.

T. D. Davidson and J. R. Harris, also of Bethesda, felled 703 pins to gain third place among the doubles leaders.

Newport Man's 406 Set Gains Second in Singles.

Jim Martland, of Newport, R. I., accomplished the most outstanding feat of the tourney program today and tonight when he collected 406 in singles to gain the runner-up berth.

Lonnie Krauss and his Coliseum pinmen rolled in all events.

Capital Bowlers Await Developments in Protest

Washington bowlers who have announced their intention to protest to the National Duck Pin Congress against permitting "Bozo" Bitunyac, of Pittsburgh, to compete in the national championship events at Richmond have delayed action until they learn whether the Pittsburgh bowler is to be permitted to roll with a Baltimore team the latter part of the week. Bitunyac holds the lead in the singles and is on the leading doubles team.

Those who complained that Bitunyac was competing in violation of the congress rules indicated that they will be content to have his singles and doubles scores stand without protest unless he is permitted to align himself with a Baltimore team. If he is permitted to enter team and all-events competition, the protesters plan to carry their complaint to the congress officials for a decision.

It is claimed that Bitunyac failed to post his entry before February 16, according to N. D. P. B. C. regulations.

County Bowling Stars Invade Richmond Today

Prince Georges County's elite of the duckpin drives will invade Richmond this afternoon and tonight in quest of honors in the National Duckpin Bowling Congress tournament. Four teams, the high-scoring combinations of the Prince Georges County League, will compete and the outstanding performers of these teams will shoot singles and doubles sets.

Lustine-Nicholson, Dixie Pig, Arcade and Chillum Teams are scheduled. The individual contingent includes Perce and Harry Wolf, John Deputy and E. Snowden, George L. Isemann and William Bowie, Hugh Waldrop and Arthur McCall, Oscar Hiser and M. H. Quail, and T. M. Belt and A. L. Trott.

Fredericksburg and High Point, N. C., are also slated to roll. William Sessenback, the 15-year-old boy wonder of the drives, is among those scheduled to roll singles and doubles.

Ex-Western High Ace May Pitch G. U. Opener

Jack Edmonston, former Western High School pitching mainstay, is making a determined bid for the role of starting pitcher for Georgetown in its inaugural baseball game a week from today with Penn State at the Hilltop.

Edmonston, a right-hander, is the only experienced hoidover from the 1928 slab corps, but this fact did not clinch the leading pitcher assignment for him this season because several other flingers, up from the 1928 freshmen, started giving him formidable opposition with the beginning of practice.

Poole, another right-hander, and White, a southpaw, are racing neck and neck with the former Western ace right now to win Coach O'Neil's call to take the box next Thursday afternoon. The Georgetown mentor probably will make his selection before the week is out.

If Edmonston throws the first ball against Penn State, there will be three former Washington high school players in the Hilltop line-up, the others being Walter Morris, third base, and Johnny Bozek, first base, who graduated from St. John's and Gonzaga, respectively.

RENEW BID FOR SOUTH ATLANTIC TITLE TOMORROW

Lichliter Is Elected American U. Captain

Dave Lichliter, a junior of Salisbury, Pa., was elected to captain the American University Basket Ball Team for next season at a meeting of the letter men yesterday at the school.

Lichliter played center regularly on the 1928-29 Eagle Quintet and was one of the team's most dependable scorers. He entered American University last September following two years at Blue Ridge College, where he also was a varsity basket ball player.

Bruce Kessler will be the only letter man missing from next year's quintet. He was a member of the varsity for four years. It was decided at the meeting to hold a program of farewell ceremonies in honor of G. Baillie Springston, athletic director, who will finish out his term at the Massachusetts avenue institution in June.

Beatty Starts Lacrosse At Washington College

Special to The Washington Post.

Chestertown, Md., March 20.—Coach William P. (Chief) Beatty, one-time all-American lacrosse man, chosen for the post of out home on the 1926 nation-wide mythical twelve, is whipping into shape the first lacrosse squad ever to swing into action on Maryland's Eastern Shore. The former University of Maryland flash, who hails from New Jersey, and who is associate athletic director of Washington College, has abundant material of the greener sort upon which to work. None of the candidates has had previous experience in the ancient game.

Some 25 aspirants for posts on the varsity team are in the field receiving instructions in the rudiments of the game. Considerable enthusiasm has been aroused among sports fans of the nine-county territory over the prospect of building up a likely lacrosse team.

It is believed the first game will draw a large crowd of Eastern Shore enthusiasts. Among the likely candidates are Crouse, Sherkey, Hope, Stevens, Phillips, Dean, Karfgin, Bunting, Burdette, Marth, Marten, Dickerson, Dubin, Stewart, Boston, Veach, Willson, Moore, Willis, Williams, Carey, Danninberg, Dodds, Mahoney and Robinson. Following is the schedule:

April 6, University of Pennsylvania (pending), away; 19, Lafayette College, at home; 27, Baltimore University, at home.

May 11, Baltimore University, away; 25, Mount Washington (Baltimore) Club, at home.

LEVSEN SEEKS RETIREMENT.

Emil (Dutch) Levsen, the Cleveland hurler who got his baseball start in the Three-I League with the Terre Haute Club, was recently sold to New Orleans, but has asked to be placed on the voluntarily retired list.

Almost the Naked Truth

it will be surprising if more than a half dozen finish it. It is doubtful if the winner will ever race again. In the first place, the course of four miles and 385 yards takes about everything any horse can offer. In the second place, even if the winner is sound at the finish, his owner is likely to reward his tremendous effort with retirement, as A. Charles Schwartz rewarded Jack Horner, which won the race three years ago.

Never Laugh at $75 Horse Between Shafts of Bus.

Most romantic of all the traditions that surround the Grand National Steeplechase is the true story of Rubio, the only American-bred horse to win the event. Rudio, shipped abroad as a racer, failed to distinguish himself on the track and was sold for $75. He put in a year between the shafts of a hotel omnibus. His entry in the Grand National in 1908 was considered a joke, but after the race Rubio himself was doing all the laughing and his were a winner's snickers. Moral: Never laugh at a $75 horse hitched to a hotel omnibus.

U. S. Ryder Cup Team To Play at Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N. C., March 20 (A.P.).—Arrangements have been made for the Ryder Cup team, the United States' group of professional golfers that will meet an English team of professionals in the annual international match, to play an exhibition match at Pinehurst on March 25, the day before the start of the North and South open tournament.

Question of Patrick's Eligibility Is Removed

Charges that Percy L. Patrick, winner of the Bill Wood duckpin sweepstakes, was not eligible to compete in the event, are unfounded, John P. "Pop" Evans, promoter of the stakes, announced last night. Several contestants in the recent event claimed that Patrick had an average of over 106, the maximum limit, he stated.

Official scorers of Masonic Department of Commerce and Federal leagues have certified that Patrick's average in none of these leagues exceeds 106.

Patrick will be awarded the $150 cash first prize. Other cash awards will be given as follows: Second, Arthur L. Kleisath, $100; third, Bill Morrisette, $75; fourth, Jack Williams, $50, and fifth, Frank A. McNey, $25.

Borotra and Hunter Win Easily in Tourney

New York, March 20 (U.P.).—Favorites advanced to the quarter final round of the national indoor tennis championships today.

Jean Borotra, of France, and Frank Hunter, No. 2 ranking player of the United States, swept aside their opposition today with little trouble.

Borotra defeated Merrit Cutler, 6—1, 6—3; Hunter, who made his first appearance on the courts today defeated Lieut. R. M. Watt, jr., U. S. N., 6—2, 6—0, in his first round match; Edward E. Jenkins, 7—5, 6—2, in the second round and W. B. Evans, 6—3, 6—2, in the third.

William Aydelotte, defending champion, who is expected to oppose Borotra in the semifinal round, defeated S. J. Harte, 8—6, 6—3, to enter the quarter finals.

Other third round scores: Julius Seligson defeated P. G. Rockafellow, 6—4, 6—4. Larry Kurzrok defeated A. L. Brumeau, 13—11, 6—2; J. G. Hall defeated W. Swaybill, 6—1, 6—2; G. S. Mangin defeated S. Seligson, 6—2, 6—2; and H. L. Bowman defeated Edward Jacobs, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Reese-Cohen Fight for Job Still Warm, McGraw Asserts

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., March 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—John McGraw, the well-known "master mind" of the Giants, in discussing his ball club today declared that the battle between Andy Reese, the "Tupllo Flash" and Andy Cohen, of El Paso, is still an open question, and, furthermore, that he has not as yet decided upon his outfield for the opening game of the season in Philadelphia next month.

When it was announced earlier today that Cohen would start out with the second team on the trip north, the opinion spread that the Jewish infielder had lost his battle to regain his job at second base and that Reese would be regularly assigned to that base this season.

"I have not decided upon my second baseman as yet," said McGraw. "Cohen is going with the second team because he is popular with the fans in this State, and wherever we have booked a game in Texas we have been requested to send Cohen with the team.

Cohen to Rejoin Regulars and Alternate at Second Base.

"That is the reason that Cohen is going to start out with the second team and not because I have decided to play Reese as the regular second baseman. Cohen will rejoin the first team in Shreveport and I probably will alternate them at second base."

The outfield situation is giving McGraw a bit of worry right now. The Giants have four experienced left-handed hitting outfielders in Jimmy Welsh, Fred Leach, Mel Ott and Eddie Roush. Early indications pointed to Welsh, Leach and Ott as the regular outfield against right-handed pitching. But Ott has not started hitting as yet and if Roush shows any flash of his brilliancy of other years he may be in the outfield along with Welsh and Leach.

Artie Veltman, Tony Kaufmann and Chick Fullis are the right-handed hitters of McGraw's outfield squad.

While McGraw has not admitted as much, he is surer of winning the pennant this year than he has been in many seasons. He has a far better balanced ball club than in the spring of 1928 because his reserved strength is greater and because his pitching staff is about the best in the National League.

Veteran Pleased With Promise Of Young Mound Talent.

"I'm well satisfied with my pitching staff," he said today. Mays looked exceptionally good in the game on Saturday and will get better as he goes along for he will improve his control.

"I'm going to carry nine or ten pitchers, maybe more, for I have until June 15 to get down to the 25 limit. Fitzsimmons is in better condition than last year and should get started quicker, although he is not considered a spring pitcher.

"I have many promising youngsters in camp this year, and I'm especially pleased with Veltman, Fullis, Jordan, Crawford and Witry. Witry has improved 100 per cent over last year, while Jordan can hit a ball almost as hard as any of the regulars."

Judge Landis arrived yesterday and was a guest of honor at a dinner given by the Giants. The judge refused to discuss Clark Griffith's statement that he would appeal the decision of the baseball commissioner in which he declared nine players free agents.

BUSINESS HIT BY LOSS OF PLAYERS

Lewis, Duryee, 2 of 3 Veterans on Hand, Fail in Studies.

THE gloomy baseball situation at Business High School was further darkened yesterday when the release of advisory marks showed that Jakie Lewis and Ed Duryee, two of Coach Lynn Woodworth's three 1928 regulars, had failed in their studies, thus barring them from competition for the next six weeks, during which the championship series will get under way.

Lewis, a catcher, and Duryee, left fielder, formed a trio with Charley Rich, first baseman and outfielder, to whom Woodworth looked hopefully as a nucleus for his new team, but now that the ineligibility bugaboo has accomplished its evil work, the Stenographers' mentor is like a child with the parts of a picture puzzle—he has numerous candidates but only one whose fitness is known to him.

Business and Tech to Transfer Training Grounds Monday.

All of the first-string players of Eastern, Western and Central received passing marks in their studies, while it is believed there will be none lost by Tech, although the marks will not be released to the Manual Trainers until tomorrow morning.

The Business and Tech squads will transfer their practices from their respective school gymnasium and unfinished stadium to the Monument Grounds next Monday, the condition of the ground permitting. So far, the grounds around the Monument have been too wet or soft for use in athletics.

Later on Coach Malcolm Edwards will take his Tech charges to the Washington Barracks diamond, there to train the remainder of the season.

Schoolboy Track Meet To Be Held Again by N. C.

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 19.—The finest prep school trackmen in the South will gather for the University of North Carolina's third annual Southern interscholastic track and field meet, carded for Emerson Field here on Saturday, May 18.

Devitt Prep School, Washington, D. C., furnished record makers in three events, including the quarter mile, the low hurdles, and the one mile relay.

The records follow:

100-yard dash (10.2s)—Scott (Hargrave M. A.), 1927; Slusser (Augusta M. A.), 1928.

220-yard dash (22.4s.)—Barron, Monroe A. and M.), 1928.

440-yard dash (51.6s.)—Kelly (Devitt Prep), 1928.

Last-Minute Goals Decide Tourney Game for Stewarts of goals from scrimmage, the two rivals had battled goal-for-goal from the start with the Reds leading at half time, 12 to 9.

The ultimate winners came back in the second half to take the lead on two successful shots from the floor. Three times the lead changed in the third quarter, Stewart Bros. leading at the start of the final period, 17 to 16. The nip-and-tuck battle continued until, with slightly more than three minutes to go, Harris started on his point scoring rampages and a hard-earned victory was assured.

With but five players on hand, the Reds made a game stand without taking chances of incurring the penalty of losing a man. Louis Richardson, Maxwell and Asquite shone for the Reds.

Noel House 130-Pounders Win Extra Period Fray.

An extra period was necessary before a decision was reached in the St. Thomas-Noel House 130-pound contest which opened last night's program.

After battling their rivals on even terms throughout the regular periods, the St. Thomas team faltered in the extra session and went down to defeat, 26 to 31.

The teams appeared well matched from the start, both offering a slow and cautious offensive. They were tied at the end of the first quarter, 8 to 8, but Noel House managed to move to the front at half time, 15 to 13.

Two successive goals by Maurice Ager, St. Thomas center, midway in the final quarter, enabled his team to knot the count at 19-all. Counsellman, of the losers, put his team in front in the last minute with a neat field goal, but with ten seconds to go, Golden counted 2 points from the floor to deadlock the issue.

The victors opened up a new offensive in the extra period and hung up four successive baskets to take a commanding lead and the final verdict.

Ager, Twoomey and Counsellman shone for the losers. Woods, Golden and Fritz figured strongly in the Noel House victory.

St. Peter's Reaches Semifinals By Defeating Crescents.

The St. Peter's Five moved into the semifinals of the 145-pound class by virtue of a 30-to-23 victory over the Crescent A. C. Team. The Crescents scored the same number of field goals as their rivals but also committed the most fouls, and the ability of the St. Peter's players to drop their free tosses through the rim decided the issue.

However, the Crescents kept a steady barrage of shots toward the basket in the second half which made them dangerous until the final whistle. St. Peter's ran up a 9-to-4 advantage in the first period and was leading, 18-to-11, at the end of the third period. Russell and McVen led their clubs in scoring.

Unbeaten J. C. C. 130-Pounders Ready to Defeat Standards.

The Jewish Community Center 130-pound team, undefeated this season, ran its string of consecutive victories to thirty-one in number by defeating the Boys' Club Standard Five, 19 to 14, in the second engagement of the evening. It was a fast-passing offensive in the closing minutes of play that saved the undefeated team from elimination.

Starting slowly, each team employed a zone defense and scoring was nigh impossible. The Standards led at the quarter, 3 to 1, and were in the van at half time, 4 to 3, Understein getting the winner's first basket as the period ended.

The third quarter brought forth the best the Center lads could muster and the Standards lost the lead, trailing at the start of the final quarter, 8 to 9. The victors then took a more substantial lead and were able to keep in front despite an eleventh-hour rally by the Standards.

Team work featured the play of both teams. Every player on the floor performed in admirable fashion.

M'LARNIN 7-5 CHOICE OVER MILLER

Garden Sold Out for Return Battle of Pair Tomorrow.

NEW YORK, March 20 (A.P.).—While Jimmy McLarnin toiled with pulleys, punching bags and sparring partners today to reduce his weight to 140 pounds, Ray Miller quit work in an effort to add as many precious ounces as possible before their ten-round struggle in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Miller, decidedly handicapped in the weights, is endeavoring to build himself up to 133 pounds, while McLarnin, growing steadily, is hard put to stay below the welterweight division. The Irish punching sensation from Vancouver intends to fight in the future as a fullfledged 147-pounder.

Although Miller, a numbing left-hand puncher from Chicago, scored a technical knockout over McLarnin in the seventh round of their recent bout in Detroit, the study Celt is on the long end of the 7-to-5 wagering. The Garden, seating 20,000, has been sold out for several days. All tickets were disposed of by mail with no public sale at the box offices.

After the match the arena will be closed to boxing for five weeks while the circus comes to town for its annual stay.

RAY SPENCER REPORTS FOR DUTY WITH NATS

failed to make the grade and was released to Orlando, later joining the smokers. He will stick around for a while, until his arm gets in good enough condition to let him give a fair sample of his wares.

With no batting drill scheduled, Manager Johnson and his assistants, Milan and Gharrity, spent considerable time practicing infield plays. The coachers picked out several flaws of some of the players as to what should be done or attempted under certain conditions. Special stress was laid on the fact that there is too much throwing while running down men on the base lines.

Fewer Throws Running Down Trapped Players Sought.

According to the coaches, the catcher, when a man is trapped on the way home, and the third sacker or short fielder, if the man is trapped between second and third, should make but one throw and then after running the man practically back to the bag. If the runner is trapped between first and second, an extra throw may be necessary to give the second sacker the ball and then it's up to him to chase the batter back to first and toss for a late killing there, the coaches impressed upon the infielders. An extended practice, which showed good results, followed instructions on the subject.

Milan also called his base stealing class for a short session, with Sam Rice added. The veteran, quite a base stealer himself, was taken in hand to be shown that he could take a longer lead off the cushion with perfect safety.

Tris Speaker, manager of the Newark Bears, accompanied by President James Sinnott, was a visitor here this morning. Their call was merely sociable. They were en route to St. Petersburg on a business errand.

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.
The Parent Counselor.

The Cotter Pin.

BUT what's that? Well, young folks, it's a little mechanical contrivance which is used on machinery to keep a nut from working loose. When you unscrew a grease cup on one of the front wheels of your automobile and remove the grease you will find a little pin running through a slot in the nut and going through a hole in the axle. Vibration, you see, would have a tendency to loosen the nut, and this is prevented by means of a little cotter pin.

Now, what do we care about this? Oh, nothing except that the absence of this little pin is said to have caused an accident which made every newspaper give far more space to it than was devoted to a prize fight in Miami. We can hardly remember the names of those fighters, but we were all keyed up when we learned that Lindy and his sweetheart had a spill.

Just a little cotter pin! I don't imagine it is more than an inch and a half long and about one-eighth of an inch in diameter. Just one of those things that a mechanic forgets to put on when he has tightened up the nut. You may have had this happen to you in your own automobile, but, I trust, without disastrous effects.

The cotter pins of life are worth looking after. If clever thieves did not forget to put in the cotter pins when they performed their criminal act they would never get caught. You know how it is. We read about a crook who lost his shirt stud, or an envelope slipped from his pocket with his name on it, or he left his finger marks on the window sash. He forgot to put in a cotter pin, so his nut slipped and he was caught.

Long ago I read a book, or it may have been an article, on the value of a cipher. It was a story about the importance of unimportant people. Did you ever notice that in some important divorce trial it is the waiter, or the servant, or the janitor, or an elevator boy who gives the damaging evidence? That in the case of a crime it is the grocery boy who is able to identify the accused?

So young folks, don't forget the cotter pin. In arithmetic the cotter pin is a decimal point. Don't say to teacher, "Oh, my only mistake was the decimal point. If I had put that in I would have had the right answer." Remember the decimal point makes the value ten times greater or ten times less, or perhaps even a hundred or a thousand times greater or less.

In law the cotter pin may not be more than a comma or a semicolon which causes a decision involving millions.

In medicine if a cotter pin is left out or put in the wrong place it may mean a lawsuit for criminal malpractice.

Remember, good young folks, that not all of us have cushions handy to break our fall or that of our sweetheart when the cotter pin fails.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

Dot: You should lead him to the great decision. Instinctively every girl knows how to bring that about. He has no right to absorb the best years of your life.

Mrs. E. H.: If you and others of my good readers would only inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope you would get from me a personal letter in regard to your questions. The two-cent stamp is essential since my mail is large and I am helpless when I don't know where you live.

Do you realize that extensive surveys reveal that over 25 per cent of our school children have eye defects? Do you need any help in preserving the eyesight of your children? How much team work is going on between your home and the chool? Does your child ever say to his teacher, "My mother always gives me coffee for breakfast, she wouldn't do that if it were bad for me?" What makes your child walk in his sleep?

Through arrangements made with this newspaper my readers are entitled to free instruction sheets on any one of the following topics: "Sleep-Walking." "Cooperation Between School and Home," "Children's Eyesight." Underscore the one you want, clip this service and send to Arthur Dean, care of this newspaper with a stamped, addressed return envelope.

A Question.

Should children be raised with the idea that they are to help their parents? Isn't it a more natural thing for parents to want to help their children? I spend my money paying old doctor and store bills, taxes and whatever else my folks will not pay for. My parents think I do nothing out of the ordinary. What do you think?

WORKING GIRL.

Answer—Legally, up to a certain age parents have all right to money children earn. There are two parties to this game—parents who should do all they can to help their children toward being well-born, well-bred and well-educated. The other, sons and daughters who, when they go to work should help out with the support of the home. Except in unusual circumstances this principle should not mean taking practically all that a child earns.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

NATIONAL.

For the last week in Lent, Holy Week, the National Theater Players will revive a comedy masterpiece, "Twin Beds," beginning Monday, March 25, with the regular matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo are coauthors of "Twin Beds." Now an established classic on the American stage, this play, which is really a farce, tells the story of a young man weary of club life. He marries and settles down to the quiet joys of domesticity. The difference between a husband's working hours and a wife's working hours is so great that there is dissatisfaction. While he is happily engaged at the office, she is at home pining for something to do. When he comes home at night, all tired out after a hard day's work, she, refreshed, is ready to go down town and see the bright lights. Denied this, she indulges in mild flirtations. These afterwards lead to consequences which cause three married couples to flee from each other, only to be brought together again under another roof. This forms the basis for the action in "Twin Beds."

SYMPHONIC BAND.

Making its first American tour, the Symphonic Band of the Royal Belgian Guards, which is visiting this country under the patronage of King Albert, will be heard in concert at Poli's Theater tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock under the local management of Mrs. Whson-Greene. The band will be conducted by its famous director, Capt. Arthur Prevost, and the program announced for this occasion includes: Prelude and Fugue in A minor (Bach), Offertory for Midnight Mass (Franck), overture, "The Bartered Bride" (Smetana); Danses Poloitsiennes, from "Prince Igor" (Borodine), and "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" (Dukas).

POLI'S.

Bayard Veiller's thrilling melodrama "The Trial of Mary Dugan," will be the attraction at Poli's Theater for the week commencing next Monday night. The story of "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is an absorbing one. Mary Dugan, a member of the "Follies," is arrested and charged with murder. Into the trial comes her younger brother, who has been studying law in California. He takes charge of her case after a disagreement with her lawyer who, apparently, is not conducting it as sincerely as he might. How the boy conducts the case in spite of tremendous handicaps, and how he discovers the actual murderer, makes a play replete with heart interest and thrills throughout its three acts. "The Trial of Mary Dugan" served to attract capacity houses to the Belasco Theater earlier in the season.

STRAND.

Promoters of burlesque are skilled in selecting what they call "box-office titles," and one of the successful demonstrations of the art of titling is "The Best Show in Town," coming to the Strand Theater next week. Selecting stage names is another art that has its effect upon ticket sales, and the lady who stars in "The Best Show in Town" has gone back as far as H. Rider Haggard to name herself "She," plus the modern addition, in "Dances of Flaming Youth." "She," the elders will recall, was a dancer, "and how" (as they say in the modern language). The Dutch comedian, Jack Erickson, is the featured funster. Anna Propp is a soubrette, and "single specialist" in her own right. As an extra added attraction tonight, Demon Gardini, the Italian bone crusher, will wrestle Bull Martin.

BOND PRICES DRIFT OFF AS FUNDS RISE

FOREIGN GROUP ERRATIC

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—With few exceptions, bond prices drifted lower today under the influence of tightening money rates and predictions of an early increase in Federal Reserve rediscount rates. The combined average of 40 bonds, compiled by the Associated Press, dropped to the lowest level in more than three years. Despite Secretary Mellon's recent advice to prudent investors to buy bonds in preference to stocks, there seems to be a rather general feeling in investment circles that easier money rates are still a necessary prelude to higher bond prices.

Today's buying centered largely in the convertible issues. Anaconda Copper 7s ran up 10 points to a new high at 266, but lost about a third of their gain. International Telephone convertible debentures failed to follow the stock into new high ground, although they closed a point higher at 117 after having touched 118¾.

U. S. Issues Move Narrowly.

U. S. Government issues moved within rather narrow and irregular limits, with the new Treasury 4¼s being offered at a slight discount, while the old 4¼s and tax-exempt Federal Land Bank long maturities yield over 5 per cent.

Railroad bonds, many of which yield only 4 to 4½ to 5 per cent, disclosed marked irregularity. Norfolk & Western convertible 6s sank to a new low level for the year, and net declines of a point or more were registered by Canadian National 4½s, Denver, Rio Grande & Western general 5s, New Haven convertible debenture 6s of 1948 and Seaboard Air Line adjustment 5s.

Baltimore & Ohio first 5s, Central of Georgia Consolidated 5s, Chicago Railways 5s, Illinois Central 4¾s and New Haven convertible debenture 6s of 1935 closed a point or so higher.

Traction Issues Are Weak.

Traction issues were weak, Interboro Rapid Transit 6s and refunding 5s, Third Avenue refunding 4s and Hudson & Manhattan refunding 5s all selling at new low prices for the year.

Oil company liens held firm in sympathy with the higher stock prices. Public utilities were irregular, establishment of a new high by Syracuse Lighting 5s of 1951 being one of the few features.

In the industrial division, Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke 6s broke 7½ points to a new low at 74 and Republic Iron & Steel collateral 5s dropped 3 points on a couple of sales. Container Corporation 6s also sank into new low ground, while American Ice 6s were marked up 1½ points, duplicating the year's high.

Foreign bonds were churned about in rather erratic fashion, with final quotations irregular.

BANK GROUP HOLDS ESSAY COMPETITION

Best Methods Against Fraud Subject for Members of Capital Chapter.

BOND MARKET IS ACTIVE

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Announcement of the opening of the annual essay contest of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, which this year will center about the subject, "Methods by Which a Bank May Best Protect Itself Against Fraud," was made yesterday at association headquarters.

As in past years, contestants will be limited to members of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, who are employes of banks having membership in the District of Columbia Bankers Association. The contest will close May 1. The authors of the three best papers will attend the June convention of the association at Montauk Point, Long Island.

It is the intention of the association to develop in the essays, first, the methods which a bank may devise to protect itself against fraud in its dealings with the public only, and, second, how employes may cooperate in making such safeguards effective.

This was brought out in a letter received yesterday by James A. Soper, president of the chapter, from Robert V. Fleming, president of the association. Mr. Soper, in turn, will send letters to each individual member of the institute, announcing the subject of the contest, and outlining the rules to be followed by those wishing to compete.

Treatment of the subject, it will be pointed out, should be broad enough to embrace all phases of fraud which may be perpetrated against a bank in its daily transactions with the public, in all departments, such as safe deposit, customers' securities, trust department, credit, telegraph, transfers, savings, paying, receiving and tellers.

The essays, which must be typewritten and double-spaced, must be limited to 2,500 words. Triplicate copies are to be submitted to Miss Grace M. Bromley, assistant secretary of the association, before May 1, with fictitious names attached, in order to conceal the identity of the authors.

H. T. Bisselle, who recently was made assistant cashier of the Riggs National Bank, was winner of last year's contest, and also carried off first honors in 1925 and 1927. Harold W. Burnside, of the Farmers & Mechanics branch of Riggs National Bank, won the first contest ever conducted by the association, in 1922. J. W. Roberts, of the American Security & Trust Co., won first prize the following year; William M. Seay, Federal-American National Bank, in 1924, and Linnaeus T. Savage, American Security & Trust Co., in 1926.

Attend New York Session.

Thomas J. Groom, of the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, State vice president for the District of Columbia of the Savings Bank Division, American Bankers Association, led the Washington delegation which left here last night to attend the Eastern Regional Savings Conference, which opens in New York today. Other local bankers in the party included W. E. Lewis, of the Northeast Savings Bank, and Richard E. Harris, of the American Security & Trust Co.

Taylor R. Durham, of Chattanooga, Tenn., president of the savings bank division, will address the delegates this morning on "The Increasing Importance of Savings." Others who are scheduled to speak today are James P. Hart, of Fall River, Mass.; G. Herbert Boehm, of Baltimore; T. W. Murray, of Boston, and William S. Van Dyke, of Pittsburgh. The concluding sessions will be held tomorrow. Special luncheons followed by addresses of a popular nature, will be held both conference days.

Arrangements have been made for the delegates to visit the New York Stock Exchange and the Federal Reserve Bank the day after the conference.

Takes New Position.

Harry E. Moore, more widely known as "Cy" Moore in the Washington financial district, who for the past eleven years has been identified with the Riggs National Bank, has been named to the staff of the Washington office of Eastman, Dillon & Co., it was announced here yesterday by Arthur Foraker, manager.

During his career in the local financial scene, Mr. Moore has made a name for himself in the securities phase of banking. Entering the Riggs National Bank in 1918, he was rapidly advanced through the junior grades to the superintendence of the securities department of the bank, which position he held for the last eight years.

In connecting with the Washington office of Eastman, Dillon & Co., Mr. Moore becomes identified with the trading department of a New York Stock Exchange firm. He is a graduate of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

Acacia Agents to Meet.

Regional conventions of agents of the Acacia Mutual Life Association will be held in Jacksonville, Fla., and New Orleans, La., the latter part of the present month, it was announced here yesterday at the home office building, 101 Indiana avenue northwest. William Montgomery, president, will preside at both gatherings and will outline to the field workers the organization's production goals for the coming months.

While complete data is not available, Mr. Montgomery is expected to carry with him to the conventions a quarterly report which will reveal the establishment of new high records for the first three months of the new year. This is forecast by the notable volume of business at branches throughout the country and at the home office here since the opening of 1929. Several hundred Acacia agents will attend each of the conventions.

Bank Stocks in Demand.

Trading in bank stocks again was a feature of yesterday's session of the Washington Stock Exchange. Four issues came out, all well above former sales levels. Riggs National Bank moved a point to 575; Federal-American National Bank, a point to 344; National Bank of Washington, 3 points to 815, and Union Trust Co., 2 points to 353. A gain of more than 3 points was noted in Corcoran Fire Insurance, which sold at 170. Capital Traction Co. brought from 99⅛ to 99¾, and Mergenthaler Linotype sold at 107¼. The bond department was unusually active, $7,000 Capital Traction 5s selling from 99¾ to 100; $5,000 Potomac Electric consolidated 5s, at 101¼, and $5,000 Washington Gas 6s series B, at 105½.

Southern Buys Rails.

Contracts for the purchase of 43,500 tons of rail, enough to lay 263 miles of track, for delivery during April, May and June, have just been let by the Southern Railway System, it was announced here yesterday by S. E. Burgess, division passenger agent. The purchase includes 11,700 tons of 130-pound section, 28,800 tons of 100-pound section and 3,000 tons of 85-pound section. The orders were divided between the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., the Bethlehem Steel Co., and the Illinois Steel Co.

Chapter Meeting Deferred.

James A. Soper, president of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, yesterday announced that the open meeting of the chapter, which was to have been held tomorrow night, has been postponed until Friday, April 19, as a tentative date. At that time certificates attesting completion of first semester courses will be awarded graduates.

New Stock Offering.

Offering of 108,500 shares of capital stock without par value of Briggs & Stratton Corporation at $34.50 a share will be made today by J. & W. Seligman & Co. This stock has been purchased from individuals and its offering represents no new financing by the corporation.

Net earnings of the corporation in 1928 after depreciation, taxes and certain adjustments were $1,064,614, equivalent to $3.54 a share on 300,000 and shares of capital stock to be outstanding. The balance sheet as of December 31 last, after adjustments, including the reclassification of capital, showed current assets of $1,742,656 and current liabilities of $354,548. There is no funded indebtedness. The corporation produces more than two-thirds of the total automobile locks made in the United States and is the largest manufacturer of small portable gasoline engines.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, March 20 (A.P.).—Advances on a bullish view of ginning figures and the weekly report of the Weather Bureau were followed by reactions in cotton today. After selling up to 21.22 in the early trading on rather an active and general demand, May declined to 20.82, or back to yesterday's closing figures, but stiffened up again in the late trading and closed at 20.92. The general market closed steady at net advances of 8 to 12 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 17 to 24 points and sold 37 to 40 points above yesterday's closing quotations during the early trading on covering or rebuying by recent sellers and a broadening of commission house demand. This apparently was influenced by the census report, placing total ginnings from the crop of 1928 at 14,269,313 running bales, counting round as half, or 14,450,007, equivalent to 500-pound bales.

These figures were rather lower than recently discussed and their publication evidently removed uncertainty which previously had held some buying in check. At any rate, the market made a bullish response to the figures. The advance also was promoted by the weekly report of the Weather Bureau referring to recent rains and overflows in the South.

March sold up to 21.28, and the new October contract to 20.50. But these prices seemed to bring in more Southern selling and after the first rush of demand had been supplied, the market turned easier under realizing or a renewal of old long liquidation.

Trading which was active at the start, tapered off as prices turned downward, but the market worked gradually lower. Near months sold back to yesterday's closing quotations, while October declined to 20.19, or 31 points from the early high level. Offerings tapered off in the last half-hour and there were rallies on renewed covering, accompanied by reports that the trade had helped to absorb the earlier offerings. Last prices were about 4 to 10 points up from the lowest.

Selling on the early advance was attributed partly to a feeling that bullish features in the weekly weather report were no worse than expected and that the ginning figures were so close to the Government's December estimate, they justified no particular change in statistical calculations.

Exports today, 11,768, making 6,684,098 this season. Port receipts, 16,506. United States port stocks, 1,819,388.

HESSE SUCCESSOR IS IN DOUBT; VOTE ON PENSION TODAY

Retirement Board to Report to District Leaders for Final Action Tuesday.

PROMOTION OF POLICE OFFICIAL TO JOB LIKELY

Several, Listed as Applicants, Say Friends Acted Hastily; Withdraw Names.

Application of Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, to be retired from active duty, effective March 31, is expected to be formally approved by the Police and Fire Departments retiring boards at its regular meeting in the District Building today. Hesse's application is supported by the statements of five of the six doctors constituting the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons.

His successor, however, is not expected to be named before next week, if then. Commissioner Proctor L. Dougherty, having direct supervision of the Police Department, said he did not expect the retiring board's action to come formally before the Commissioners before their regular meeting Tuesday.

Appointment May Be Delayed.

Whether a new chief will be named on that day he could not say, the Commissioner added. There is nothing to compel the appointment of a new superintendent of police effective the day after Hesse leaves office and the Commissioners intend to withhold their decision until they have carefully checked the qualifications of all candidates, Dougherty said.

Most of the names on the list of possibilities were given little consideration. They had been proposed in some instances by friends without the knowledge of the persons suggested, it was said. Maj. Gen. Charles L. Rhodes, retired, yesterday told the Commissioners he would not be available for appointment. Merritt O. Chance, former city postmaster, also formally eliminated himself from consideration. Both names were proposed by friends.

Few to Select From.

A check is being made of all men suggested and others are expected to eliminate themselves, so that when the moment of picking Hesse's successor comes the Commissioners will have to choose between not more than half the number suggested.

There is apparently to be none of the determined wire pulling and undercover battling for the job this time which has been seen in the past, and the situation now seems to favor promotion of an official now in the department, with Henry G. Pratt, senior assistant superintendent, and Inspector William S. Shelby, assistant superintendent, standing first among the police candidates and Walter G. Ferguson, White House Secret Service man, apparently heading the list of outsiders.

Man, Granted Divorce, Told of Mystery House

An interlocutory degree of absolute divorce was awarded Ellis H. Wright, of 505 Third street northwest, against his wife, Mrs. Gladys J. Wright, yesterday by Justice Jennings Bailey in equity branch of the District Supreme Court.

In his suit for divorce, instituted in June, 1928, Wright charged that his wife and Frank Steck, corespondent in the case, were in business with offices in the Barr Building and lived together in a residence at Potomac, Va., known in the neighborhood as "The House of Mystery." They always came to the house late at night and used only flashlights and candles for illuminating the place, it was charged. Frank Elder, attorney, appeared for Steck.

New Day-Off System Evolved for Firemen

A new system of assigning days off and changing platoons in the fire department will be inaugurated at 8 o'clock the morning of March 31, under a general order issued yesterday by Fire Chief George S. Watson.

The change was ordered so as to eliminate the day-to-day unevenness in the number of men assigned on and off duty, Chief Watson said. Under the present scheme more men usually are on duty on Saturday of each week than any other day. Each man hereafter is to have his day off advanced one day each week, the men assigned off on Saturday one week being assigned off on Sunday the next week and so on.

M. A. Botts Rearrested On Charge of Bigamy

Melvin A. Botts, 28, of 1824 Fifteenth street northwest, who was released under $1,000 bond Monday following his arrest on a warrant charging a statutory offense, was rearrested yesterday and held for Fairfax, Va., authorities, who hold a warrant charging him with bigamy.

The complainant, Mrs. Beatrice E. Botts, whom he married March 3, charged that her husband later married Minnie O. Baggerly without having obtained a divorce from his first wife.

Street Car Hits Woman; Her Injuries Are Slight

Mrs. Anita E. McKay, 63 years old, of 2135 K street northwest, yesterday afternoon escaped serious injury when she was knocked down by a Washington Railway & Electric Co.'s street car while crossing at Seventeenth and I streets northwest.

She was removed to Emergency Hospital in a passing automobile and treated by Dr. J. E. Lewis for bruises to the back and for shock. Mrs. McKay later went to her home.

Woman's Foot Injured By Dr. Hickling's Auto

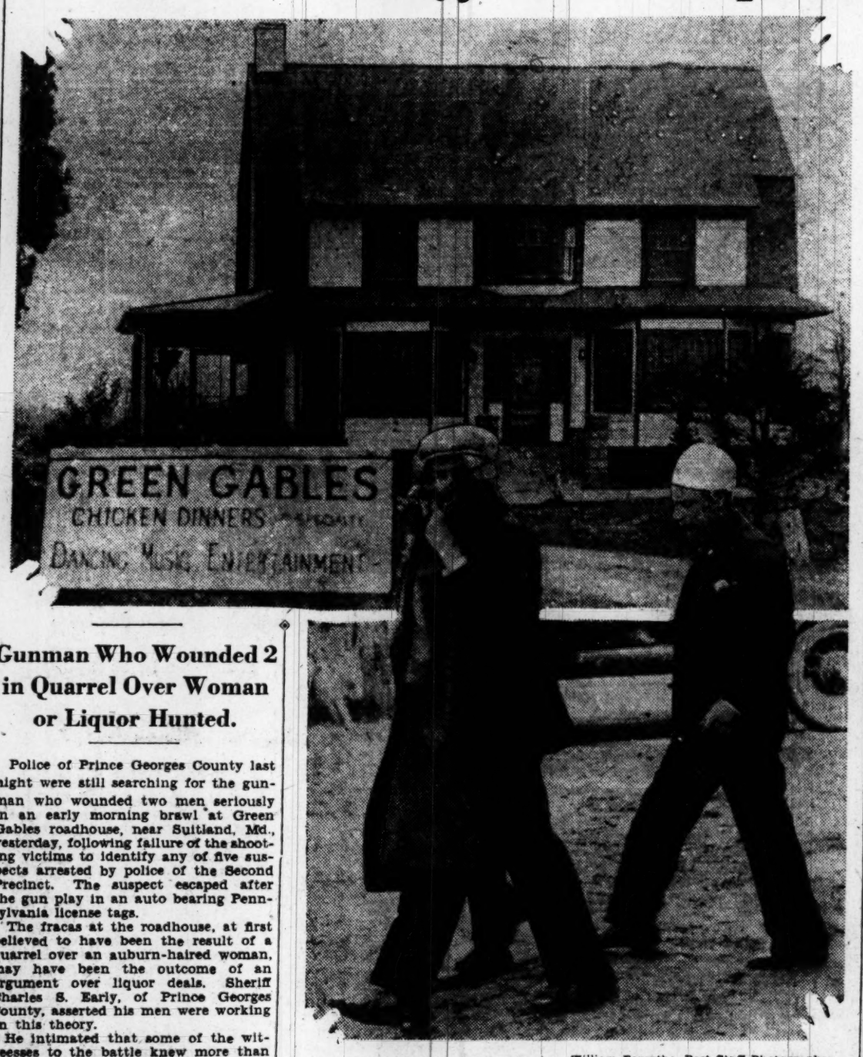
Mrs. George H. Bailey, 35 years old, of 3616 Tilden street northwest, was injured yesterday morning in front of the Union Station when an automobile operated by Dr. E. Percy Hickling, District alienist, ran over her right foot.

She was taken to a hospital by Dr. Hickling, given treatment and sent home.

Roman Pact Lecture Tonight.

Under auspices of the Holy Name Society, the Rev. Lawrence K. Patterson, professor of history at Woodstock College, will deliver a free address tonight at 8 o'clock in Gonzaga College Theater on "The Roman Question, the Italian Treaty and the Concordat."

Victims of Roadhouse Shooting Fail to Identify Five Suspects



William Forsythe, Post Staff Photographer.

Gunman Who Wounded 2 in Quarrel Over Woman or Liquor Hunted.

Police of Prince Georges County last night were still searching for the gunman who wounded two men seriously in an early morning brawl at Green Gables roadhouse, near Suitland, Md., yesterday, following failure of the shooting victims to identify any of five suspects arrested by police of the Second Precinct. The suspect escaped after the gun play in an auto bearing Pennsylvania license tags.

The fracas at the roadhouse, at first believed to have been the result of a quarrel over an auburn-haired woman, may have been the outcome of an argument over liquor deals. Sheriff Charles S. Early, of Prince Georges County, asserted his men were working on this theory.

He intimated that some of the witnesses to the battle knew more than they have so far revealed to the police and that he expects developments pointing to the liquor cause, rather than to a fight over the woman.

The woman over whom the shooting occurred, police say, is Ruth Bradley, 29 years old, of 1632 S street northwest. She is being sought following her escape from the scene in the automobile of the suspected gunman.

Five Face Wounded Men.

Charles Wesley Poutra, 32 years old, 1632 S street northwest, and Joe Hauser, 30 years old, 1918 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, are the men in the hospital. Poutra was wounded in the abdomen. Hauser was struck in the left shoulder, the bullet coming out through his neck.

The five men who were taken to Emergency Hospital to be viewed by the wounded men were Vernon Aldrich Sawyer, 25, 1342 Rhode Island avenue northwest, chauffeur; Donald Graham Miller, 24, same address and occupation; Reginald Mann, 29, 1912 Twenty-second street northwest, laborer; Norval Lawson Sauls, 32, Cherrydale, Va., chauffeur, and William Andrews Banton, 21, 801 First street northwest, student. All except Sauls were charged with destroying private property and disorderly conduct. Sauls was charged only with disorderly conduct.

They were arrested at 8 o'clock yesterday morning by Patrolman H. B. Rector and N. O. Holes in Apartment 302, 1301 Massachusetts avenue, on complaint of Mrs. Helen Cyr, resident manager of the apartment house.

Two Held as Witnesses.

The story of the shooting was learned from Louis Frederick Behrens, 39 years old, 1632 S street, who was one of two men held as witnesses in the case. Behrens is known as "John Bunny." He suffered severe scalp wounds when struck over the head with a pistol butt during the melee. John Lawrence Brenner, 37 years old, 1262 Twenty-first street northwest, is the other witness.

According to Behrens' statement to Prince Georges police, after officials of Washington had turned him and Brenner over to the county authorities, the fight started when the man suspected of the shooting charged Behrens with attempting to steal his girl, the Bradley woman.

Behrens told police that he and Poutra were riding around the city Tuesday night. At Ninth and E streets, they assert, they were hailed by Ruth Bradley and were introduced to Hauser and the man suspected of the shooting. They decided to drive to Green Gables.

Accused of "Stealing" Girl.

While there, Behrens said, he danced with several women, including Ruth Bradley. Afterward he said the Italian told him to "come outside," where he was accused of "stealing" the girl.

"I've only been married two weeks and I love my wife too well to want anybody else's girl," Behrens told police he informed his accuser. The men shook hands and went back into the dance hall.

Soon afterward, Behrens asserts, the man who did the shooting rose, struck him across the face and as Behrens attempted to defend himself began firing his gun. Poutra and Hauser fell as the gun play continued, while others in the place ducked for cover.

Behrens says he does not remember what happened after the firing started, because he was dazed by a blow over the head. When he recovered the man who did the shooting and the Bradley woman were gone. Behrens drove his auto into Washington, bringing Poutra to Emergency Hospital. District police arrested Behrens for Maryland authorities at that time. A taxicab driver, who had been called by a patron of the Green Gables, brought Hauser to the hospital.

Two Released on Bonds.

At a hearing before Judge Harry Gore in Upper Marlboro yesterday, Behrens was released on $1,000 bond and Brenner on $500 bond, both furnished by Elmer Pumphrey, of Upper Marlboro. Brenner told police he saw none of the shooting, having been outside at the time.

Dr. Leon Gordon, who first treated the injured men when they were brought to Emergency yesterday morning, gave a quart of his blood for a transfusion for Poutra, but the latter's condition is still regarded as critical. Hauser has the better chance to recover, physicians state, although his left arm is paralyzed.

Headquarters Detectives Richard H. Mansfield and Curtis Trammell arrested Behrens and Brenner as they arrived at the hospital with their injured companions, later turning them over to Prince Georges officials.

In the rush of the getaway, overcoats, hats and personal effects were left by the suspect and the Bradley woman, who accompanied him.

Identification of the woman in the case was made through her District of Columbia automobile operator's license, issued March 6, which she dropped in her haste.

2 MEN FACE TRIALS UNDER JONES LAW

2 FINED FOR POSSESSION

Three charges of the violation of the Jones liquor felony law were filed yesterday in Police Court. Sentence was pronounced on two persons, who pleaded guilty to liquor charges under the old law.

Charged with selling liquor in connection with his tonsorial profession, Clarence McCormick, colored barber, of 707 L street northwest, who was arrested Tuesday by Detective J. J. Tolson, of the Second Precinct, was held in $2,000 bail for grand jury action.

Isaac Deyeu, alias Tally Day, waived a hearing and was held for the jury in $2,500 bail on a charge of transporting 196 quarts of liquor. He was arrested in the vicinity of Third and C streets southwest by Detectives R. J. Barrett and Flogel Truscott, after he is alleged to have abandoned his automobile and made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from police in a foot race.

Hearing of a transporting charge against Maurice Hoar, 30 years old, who was arrested by Third Precinct police, charged with having 45 gallons of alcohol in his automobile, was continued.

David Wise, colored, arrested on sale and possession charges under the old law, acknowledged his guilt before Judge Ralph Given and was sentenced to pay a $200 fine. Willie Moore, colored, who escaped prosecution on a charge of selling liquor in violation of the Jones law, pleaded guilty to a possession charge, and was fined $50. The sale case against the Moore woman, who was arrested March 7, was based on an alleged "buy" made through Edward Smith, one of the two negro "stool pigeons" recently murdered.

2 Policemen Trap Man Selling Pint

He Upsets Gin Bottle and Charge of Destroying U. S. Property Results.

A police trap, which netted a bootlegging suspect, four charges against the man held and considerable activity by police of Eighth Precinct in dodging broken glass all centered around one pint of alleged gin last night.

Patrolmen W. R. Laflin and William McEwen hid in an alley at the rear of 2104 Fourteenth street northwest and there, they charge, Jack Cisenfield, Hyattsville, Md., was seized while selling the pint of gin to a hacker.

Taken to the station Cisenfield was charged with sale, possession and transportation of the pint. While waiting to be taken to a cell, Cisenfield is said to have leaped to his feet, knocked the bottle off the desk, spilling its contents on the floor. McEwen sponged up enough to make a chemical analysis and an extra charge of destroying Government property was placed on the blotter against Cisenfield.

Man and Wife Taken After Rum-Raid Fight

Sergt. Oscar J. Letterman, head of the special liquor-raiding squad, and Detective Richard Cox narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday during a half hour's fight which climaxed their raid at the home of Claude Booze, colored, 37 years old, of 694 Fourth street northeast.

Booze was charged with violation of the Jones law and assault, and his 200-pound wife, Annie, 33 years old, with illegal possession and assault on the policemen, who charged them with attacking them with scissors, an aluminum pitcher, glassware and their fists.

EDUCATION BUDGET SESSION ON APRIL 10

Citizens and School Board to Discuss Program at the Franklin Building.

EASTER RECESS DEFINED

The Board of Education, at its meeting yesterday in the Franklin Building, named the night of April 10 for its anual conference with representatives of the various citizens groups for discussion of provisions of the next school budget.

The conference will be held at 8 o'clock in the auditorium at the Franklin Building.

With 40 applicants received for the newly created position of assistant superintendent of public schools in charge of buildings and grounds, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools announced that his selection for the post would be submited to the board for approval "within a very short time."

Easter vacation in the public schools will begin March 29, and will continue until Monday, April 8, Dr. Ballou announced. At the same time, the board announced it would not meet again until April 17.

The Board of Education will meet Wednesday with school officers for the purpose of familiarizing its members with provisions of the act passed by the last Congress, giving the Board of Education jurisdiction over all so-called "diploma mills" operating in the District of Columbia.

The board approved the recommendation of Dr. Ballou for the adoption of 127 new text books for use in the elementary, junior high and senior high schools and the discontinuance of 91 others as regular text books in the same schools.

Mrs. Florence P. Edinburg, a first grade teacher, was ordered suspended indefinitely by the board as a result of a charge that she participated in a gainful occupation while on education leave.

An offer by the Washington Gas Light Co. for a scholarship in gas engineering in Johns Hopkins University was accepted by the board.

Fireman Told to Pay Alimony or Go to Jail

Wallace Souder, a District fireman attached to No. 22 Engine Company, was cited in an order signed by Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday in District Supreme Court to pay his wife, Mrs. Sallie Souder, of 612 Lamont street northwest, alimony which the wife said was in arrears, or serve 30 days in the District Jail for contempt of court.

Mrs. Souder instituted suit for limited divorce in September, 1925, on charges of desertion and nonsupport. They were married at Rockville, Md., on September 27, 1917, and have one child. Souder originally was ordered to pay his wife $60 a month, but the payment was reduced to $50 a month on his plea that the original amount was greater than he could pay. Attorney Albert D. Esher appeared for Mrs. Souder.

SMART AND STUPID DRIVERS IN PRIVATE AUTOS ARE MENACE

Former Use Expert Handling of Cars to Bully Others Out of Rights.

THEIR ARREST DIFFICULT AS THEY ARE WATCHFUL

Latter Blithely Ignore Rules of Safety Through Lack of Understanding.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

The "smart aleck" driver using his knowledge of the traffic regulations to run rampant through the motor vehicle stream, and the ignorant, stupid operator who mars the face of safety with a stodgy, complacent "dumbness" constitute the two groups among private vehicle operators of Washington whose continual misdeeds lead to amazement that they ever were able to acquire and keep operating permits.

Between them and fighting to maintain the safety that is produced by obedience to and knowledge of the traffic regulations, stands the mass of drivers.

There is little choice, as the average person views them, between the skillful, but tricky and treacherous driver and the incompetent, ignorant one. Both are held to be a distinct menace though their methods are radically different. The one, weaving his way through traffic at high speed, sliding around corners, racing signal lights and otherwise taking advantage of other drivers and pedestrians, creates his particular type of dangers. The other stodgily pursues his way past stop signs, constantly putting it up to the other driver or walker to avoid an accident.

Specific Case Is Given.

A specific case is provided by a woman driver whose license plate number and description were recorded by the writer. The incident is not presented as illustrating a distinction between the sexes in handling a car, but to show what is believed to be an unwitting series of violations based upon a lack of knowledge of the traffic regulations. Here are the facts:

This driver, making a left turn into H street, which is a one-way street west, pulled far over to the left, cut the corner, and failed to give a signal, thereby violating three rules at one turn. In H street she took the middle of the thoroughfare and proceeded in a leisurely manner down a lane that prevented overtaking vehicles from passing. At Tenth street, which is guarded by a stop sign, she passed blithely across without so much as slackening her pace, and in spite of the fact that considerable traffic was moving in both directions at the intersection. At Thirteenth street a red light was showing, but the driver crossed the intersection entirely oblivious of that fact.

Six violations in a few short blocks! None of them malicious, and none indicating a wilful usurpation of other drivers' or pedestrians' rights. Just a stolid pursuit of an objective, that may have been a comfortable home, by a person who looked intelligent, but seemed in total darkness concerning traffic regulations! Obviously, the driver was one who would not take a chance of operating a vehicle without a permit. How it was obtained, though, causes one to wonder.

Careless Drivers Numerous.

Observation reveals that this incident may be multiplied scores of times in the course of an average day's driving about the National Capital. The group of passenger car operators who thus reveal that they do not know the basic regulations pertaining to safety is large enough to draw vigorous criticism for the conditions that permit them to menace safety on so large and significant a scale.

Equal astonishment apparently reigns over the unabated misconduct of the other type of traffic miscreant, the driver who knows how to handle a car with skill and who knows the traffic regulations—and abuses both. The searching looks cast to right and left and to the rear on the part of this operator leave no doubt that he is gauging his speed not by the legal or reasonable limit, but by whether or not a policeman is in the vicinity.

This type of driver, too, violates the rule requiring a full stop before crossing a boulevard or arterial highway. But, he does it with a different demeanor. He measures his chance of "getting by" by determining whether his misdeed is being watched.

Clears Way by Speed.

With the same air, he is accused of cutting corners, dashing menacingly up to intersections in an effort to "bluff" the other driver or pedestrian, and otherwise pursuing his tricky way through traffic.

It is recognized that one of the worst aspects of this type of driver is that, constantly alert against detection, he is difficult to apprehend. When a motorcycle officer is in the vicinity his conduct is highly circumspect and this characteristic is held to be one of safety's greatest obstacles. "Spoil-sport" and "unprincipled" are two of the names attached to this type of driver by his critics.

Especially evident is the justice of these terms in connection with this operator's attitude toward pedestrians. That he knows the law which gives walkers the right-of-way at unpolices or unlighted intersections often is obvious in his controlled approach to a crosswalk, but so long as the pedestrian shows the slightest timidity or hesitation to take his rights, the driver takes full and unfair advantage of the fear his tactics have created.

Should be Removed from Streets.

Constantly crowding safety, ever attempting to demonstrate that he is a "good driver," the "smart aleck" type is entirely too common in Washington motordom.

Along with the ignorant driver, his kind, competent critics declare, should be removed from the streets, as far as possible, before traffic reaches its peak with the arrival of spring and its host of tourist visitors. Under conditions of congestion, the chaos created by these large groups among private vehicle operators is held to provide traffic with two of its most acute dangers.

Girl, 12, Killed by Car As She Hurries Home

Mary Bertha Armstrong Darts Into Auto's Path on Sixteenth Street.

MARY BERTHA ARMSTRONG.

Twelve-year-old Mary Bertha Armstrong, of apartment 2, the Leamington, 2503 Fourteenth street northwest, died at 5:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Garfield Hospital from injuries received an hour and a half earlier when she was struck by an automobile on Sixteenth street near Euclid street northwest.

The child had just left her play in Meridian Park, nearby, and was crossing Sixteenth street between Crescent place and Euclid street northwest when she was struck by the southbound automobile of George D. Steadman, a roofer, of 110 Elm avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Steadman picked the child up and took her to Garfield Hospital, where she was treated, by Dr. J. N. Bankhead, for fractures of the skull. She died without regaining consciousness. Dr. J. Ramsay Nevitt, District coroner, was notified, and Steadman is held at the Eighth Precinct Station pending his action.

Mary, who was a student at the Henry D. Cooke School, is survived by her parents, G. Homer and Virginia Armstrong, and by a younger sister, Louise. After returning from school and finding no one at home, the child left a note for her mother, which read as follows: "I have gone out to play with Mary Frances. You know, the girl I brought up here once. She lives on Ontario road. Will be back about 5:30."

The identity of her companion was not known last night, but witnesses say that the two girls started to cross the street together and that apparently the Armstrong girl became confused and stopped in the middle of the street while her playmate darted ahead.

Mrs. Armstrong was near prostration at her home following word of the death of her daughter, and the Rev. Harvey Baker Smith, pastor of the Columbia Heights Christian Church, of which Mary was a member, was with her in an effort to console her. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

MOTORISTS GATHER TO HEAR PROBLEMS

500 Representatives of Clubs Affiliated With A. A. A. in Session Here.

THORPE ADDRESSES GROUP

More than 500 representatives of clubs and State associations affiliated with the American Automobile Association throughout the United States and in Canada today will attend the second of a three-day conference at the Wardman Park Hotel for the discussion of the varied problems of motorings

Matt F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, will preside at the general session this morning, at which discussion will center around development of travel and emergency road services. William P. MacCracken, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, and Horace M. Albright, director of national parks, will be speakers at a luncheon session today.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, welcomed the delegates when they gathered yesterday. The greetings of Canada were extended by T. C. Kirby, of the Montreal Motor League.

The principal speaker at the opening session was Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, who outlined the advantages of group effort. Charles C. Janes, secretary of the A. A. A., presided.

Prince Georges and Takoma Park police yesterday were just as far from clearing up the brutal attack upon Mrs. Clara Millar, 32 years old, in her home in Wildwood addition to Takoma Park as at the time of the attack one week ago.

Charles Marshall, colored, 23 years old, an employe of the Manor Club, yesterday was taken before Mrs. Millar but she declared he was not the man. Marshall resembled the assailant so closely, however, that Mrs. Millar at first declared him to be the man but after closer scrutiny she said that he was not the right one. Pictures of Marshall were taken and will be broadcast as the closest approximation to the appearance of the assailant yet found.

Six Tons of Grass Seed Planted in Parks Here

Sowing of grass seed in the public parks was begun yesterday by forces of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, which has begun its spring clean-up, including the painting of benches, baskets and fences.

Six and a half tons of grass seed will be planted, four of it in Anacostia Park. Twenty-five workmen of the maintenance division of the office are at work rolling the tennis courts and baseball diamonds. The latter will be open again Saturday.

College Head Waitress Dies of Poison Potion

Miss Hazel Shifflette, 21 years old, head waitress for the past four years at Gallaudet College, died at Sibley Memorial Hospital last night from the effects of poison reported by police to have been self-administered Tuesday at the college.

No motive for the girl's action has been determined. She is survived by a brother-in-law, F. J. Pagan, of 36 Sixteenth street northeast. Funeral services will be arranged after a verdict is announced by the coroner.

Truck Driver Injured In Collision With Auto

Kenneth Warren, of Arlington, received fractured ribs and other injuries last night when a truck he was driving collided with an automobile reported to have been driven by Olin Offutt, of Washington, whose street address was not reported by police.

The accident occurred on Columbia pike, Arlington County. Warren was taken to Emergency Hospital. Offutt escaped with slight injuries. No arrest was made.

5-Year-Old Boy Injured By Auto While at Play

Robert Damato, 5 years old, of 209 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, early last night was knocked down by an automobile while playing in front of 106 Second street northwest.

Edward Brown, of 1411 Fourth street northwest, driver of the machine that struck the child, took him to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for severe injuries to his head and a fractured arm.

$175 Watch Reported Stolen.

A watch valued at $175 was stolen from Mrs. Josephine Mastin, of 434 East Capitol street, on Monday, she reported to police yesterday.

LOWER INCOME TAX URGED BY LAWYERS

Federal Bar Association Also Indorses Hoover's Plan to Enforce All Laws.

AID TO CRIMINAL DECRIED

Reduction of taxes on all earned incomes, when the condition of the Government's finances warrants such action, was asked, and President Hoover's plan for enforcement of all laws was approved in resolutions adopted last night by the executive council of the Federal Bar Association, meeting in the Department of Interior Building.

Stating that the period of good income for wage, fee or commission earners is in many cases short and that heavy taxes during this peak of the earning period prevents accumulation of capital for maintenance after earning capacity has been reduced, the resolution urged Congress to enact legislation for reduction as soon as financial conditions in the Government warrant. Cooperation with newspapers and other organizations in the movement was also advocated.

The resolution on law enforcement pledged the support of the association to President Hoover's program for enforcement of all laws and deplored any action by members of the bar who advise or assist the criminal classes in violating the law or evading the penalties thereof.

A proposed amendment to the constitution of the association raising the number of members of the executive council from 17 to 27, was read by Edwin A. Niess, of the Postoffice Department. It will be offered at the next meeting of the association on April 2, when Judge Fenton W. Booth, of the United States Court of Claims, is expected to address the members.

Attention of the council was called to the Bar of the United States, of which Maj. Charles Freeman is president, and members were urged to consider its purposes and join if possible.

Among those who addressed the meeting were William R. Vallance, president of the Federal Bar Association, who presided; Ralph G. Vornall, Judge David D. Caldwell, Department of Justice, and J. Ernest Downin and Maj. Horace Jones, both of the Veterans Bureau.

Former Policeman Jailed for Month

James Amick Is Convicted of Reckless Driving, at 70 Miles an Hour.

James Amick, former local policeman, of 1430 K street southeast, was sentenced to serve a month in the District Jail by Judge Gus A. Schuldt yesterday in Traffic Court, following his conviction on a reckless driving charge.

He was arrested after the automobile he was driving along Pennsylvania avenue southeast was overtaken by Policeman M. W. Hanger, of the Eleventh Precinct, Tuesday night. Hanger testified the speed of the automobile varied from 50 to 70 miles an hour.

Attracted by the screams of a woman in the car, Hanger said, he set out in pursuit of the car and overtook it after a race of several block. He said Amick told him he was taking the woman in the car home, but the woman, Mary Rawlings, told him she lived in the other direction from which Amick was driving.

Pocketbook Stolen in Store.

A pocketbook containing $35 in cash, a rosary and a small diamond ring, valued at $100, was stolen from beneath the counter of the M. Brooks & Son ladies' furnishing store, 1109 G street northwest, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Helen Shenk, of 1021 Eleventh street northwest, reported to police.

MAJ. DAVISON SETS OUT ON TOUR TO AID AIRPORT IN CAPITAL

District Official Plans to See Cleveland's and Detroit's Model Facilities.

EXPECTS TO BE READY FOR INQUIRY IN APRIL

Accompanied by R. J. Cottrell, Executive Secretary of Board of Trade.

Maj. D. A. Davison, assistant engineer commissioner, left here last night for Cleveland, where he will begin his airport survey in connection with the project for a municipal airport for Washington.

After inspecting the Cleveland airport, which is one of the finest in the country, Davison will move on to Detroit, where he will look over the great Ford airport. He may end his tour there, or he may go to Buffalo.

Accompanied by Cottrell.

He was accompanied on the trip by Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade. This organization has been in the forefront in the movement to establish a municipal airport here.

Upon his return to Washington, Maj. Davison expects to be in a position to answer any question that might be put to him when he appears before the Congressional airport committee early in April.

Represents City in Project.

This joint committee, which is seeking to determine how much the Federal and District Governments should contribute toward the proposed airport, recently called on the District Government and four Federal departments to submit reports outlining their needs with respect to an airport.

Maj. Davison was assigned to prepare the report for the District government. Not only will he cite the District's needs, but he will make recommendations with regard to the cost and use of the field.

Building Trades Ask Hoover's Aid

President Urged to Order Razing of Structures as Help to Jobless.

President Hoover now has under consideration a request from the Washington Building Trades Council to order the immediate razing of buildings on sites needed for the Federal building program. The purpose of this is to relieve the unemployment situation. Between 10,000 and 20,000 persons are reported by the council to be unemployed.

The petition submitted to President Hoover bears the signatures of delegates from 30 local building unions, representing more than 3,000 workers. Charles E. Young, executive secretary of the council, believes that if President Hoover orders immediate razing of these buildings that business conditions throughout the city will be improved.

Empty apartment houses and other dwelling places in various parts of the city will be occupied as persons are obliged to move from the buildings that are torn down, Young pointed out.

Dairy Employe Sues For $10,000 in Injuries

Charles W. Hohman, of Berwyn, Md., asked $10,000 damages for alleged personal injuries in a suit against Joseph A. Wise, Raymond J. Wise and H. Estell Wise, trading as the Wise Brothers, a dairy, yesterday in the District Supreme Court.

Through Attorneys John F. Lillard and H. Winship Wheatley, the plaintiff declared he was employed by the defendants to sterilize milk. On March 27, 1928, the sterilization process was changed without the knowledge of the employe and in pursuance of his duties, he said, he suffered severe burns about the body when scalding water escaped from pipes.

Hoover's Talk to Press Group to Be Broadcast

Arrangements have just been completed by the National Broadcasting Co. and the Associated Press to broadcast the address of President Hoover before the annual luncheon of the Associated Press over a coast to coast network Monday, April 22, Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., announced yesterday.

The luncheon will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City and the broadcast will start at 1 o'clock and last approximately an hour. This will be President Hoover's first address since his inauguration.

Gen. Nobile's Rescuer To Visit Capital Today

(Associated Press.)

Capt. Einer Paul Lunborg, rescuer of Gen. Nobile and members of his ill-fated Polar expedition last year, will be presented to President Hoover today by the Swedish Minister.

Lundborg, member of the Swedish army flying corps, who is now on a tour of the United States, studying aviation development and delivering lectures, is to arrive in Washington this morning and leave for Philadelphia after a luncheon at the Swedish Legation.

Bandits Get Company Cash, Overlook Workers' Salary

Two holdup men took $87.27 that belonged to the Standard Oil Company from the right hand shirt pocket of B. B. Weaver, 22 years old, manager of the Standard Oil filling station at 1410 H street northeast, and left $60 of the young man's own money in the upper left pocket, about 9 o'clock last night.

According to Weaver, the two strangers entered his office with guns, ordered him to "stick 'em up," and took the wallet in his right-hand pocket. They also took some small change out of his hip pocket, Weaver said, but disregarded his left upper pocket, where he kept his personal cash. Weaver had just been paid and that is why he had the large sum with him.

The two holdup men, who were described as young and fairly well-dressed, used a green Cadillac touring car for their getaway, Detectives E. E. Thompson and Nally Thomas, who investigated the case, learned. The car was left two blocks from the scene of the robbery. Several people in the vicinity reported that they saw the men speed off in the green car. A hunt for the car was ordered.
